POLITICAL NOTES.

—There will be forty-eight farmers in the next Ohio Legislature.

—The Democrats of the North are crowing too loudly over the success of their White League brethren in Mississippi. The State will swing back safely to its Republican moorings, next year.

—The Republicans of Illinois are going right to work in earnest to organize on a working basis for next year's campaign. By preparing for the canvass thus early, earnestly, honestly and ably, they deserve and will achieve success.

—It appears that some of the New Hampshire Democrats are urging discontinuance of the State Normal School. That party never yet had three pecks of modern ideas on the subject of education, anyhow.

—A recount of the ballot boxes in Hamilton county, Ohio, which is now going on, shows that the Republican candidate for County Commissioner, at the October election, was counted out by the Democratic election officers. Another instance of Democratic honesty.

—The outlook for civilization and progress in Texas is not of the most encouraging character, just at present. The Democratic Constitutional Convention, which lately adjourned, arranged carefully for "a white man's government," and practically abolished the free school system.

—The policy now likely to be adopted by the Democrats in Congress this winter is inaction. The New York Tribune kindly comes forward and instructs the Republicans as to their duty. Namely, to force the resumption of specie payments, so much desired by and so essential to the interests of Mr. Jay Gould.

—The public debt of the United States was at the highest point in 1866, when it amounted to $2,783,425,879. At the beginning of the last month it amounted to $2,118,397,212, showing a reduction of $665,028,667 in nine years, or an average of nearly $74,000,000 a year. Under a Democratic administration the decrease would most probably have been nil.

—The rumor comes from Washington that important changes are to be made in the Interior Department to-day. Secretary Chandler refuses to state who will be removed, saying:

"A dog always squeals as loud when one joint of his tail is cut off as he does when it is cut off at the butt. I am not going to have but one squeal, and, if you publish the name of the tail, it will be too much like taking off a joint at a time."

—The very latest aspirant for President Grant's official shoes, is the Rev. W. E. Mathews, of Noble county, Ohio. He has been a preacher and school teacher for thirty years, and thinks such a course of training eminently fits him for the Presidency. He is not, he says, "a whit behind old George Washington in principle," and calls himself a Washingtonian Republican. Give the old man a chance

—It is not at all likely that the United States Senate will agree to the proposition, said to have been determined on by the leaders of the House, to reduce the United States army ten thousand men. It is now a dozen years since there was a political conflict between the two branches of Congress, and a long session may be expected, inasmuch as legislation must necessarily be slow with such a fight as the lower chamber evidently intends to provoke. The great struggle will probably be over some of the appropriation bills.

—A Western exchange says: "It is quite evident that President Grant's friends are putting out cautious 'feelers' for a third term." And it is quite evident that, even if they are, the "feelers" in question have found nothing on which they could lay hold. The probabilities are that these sporadic attempts to get up a revival of "Grantism" are made by people who have nothing to gain and everything to lose in the event of a new man for President, and that their efforts, instead of being prompted by Grant, are prompted by their selfish disposition and desire to hold on to that which they have.

DEATH OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

Hon. Henry Wilson, Vice-President of the United States, died in Washington, very suddenly, at half past seven o'clock Monday morning, November 22nd. He rested well Sunday night and awoke at 7 A. M. and expressed himself as feeling better. He sat up in bed and took his medicine, and then lay down on his left side, and expired in a few moments without a struggle. The authorities at Washington and the country were taken by surprise at the sudden announcement of his death, as it was generally supposed that the crisis had passed, and that he would soon be able to leave his room. We might say in this connection (if indeed it is proper to allude to the low Billingsgate of our contemporary, the Watchman, in an article of this kind) that the news of his death following so close on these reports of his improved condition led us to hesitate to announce his death in our paper, hoping that there might be some mistake, not wishing to harrow up the feelings of our readers with such painful news upon any uncertainty of its correctness; and as we had all our copy in early Tuesday we did not become fully satisfied of its truth until the paper was finished and ready for the press. We hope this explanation will satisfy our readers, and care very little whether it proves satisfactory to the editor of the Watchman or not.

In this sad bereavement the nation mourns the loss of one of its purest and most patriotic statesmen. The life of Henry Wilson shows in an eminent degree the possibilities of an American citizen. The following brief extract from one of his speeches tells in graphic language the extreme poverty of his boyhood days:

I feel that I have a right to speak for toiling and to toiling men. I was born here in your county of Strafford. I was born in poverty; want sat at my cradle. I know what it is to ask a mother for bread when she has none to give. I left my home at ten years of age, and served an apprenticeship of eleven years, receiving a month's schooling each year, and, at the end of eleven years hard labor, a yoke of oxen and six sheep, which brought me eighty-four dollars. Eighty-four dollars for eleven years of hard toil. I never spent the amount of one dollar in money, counting every penny, from the time I was born until I was twenty-one years of age.. I know what is to travel weary miles and ask my fellow men to give me leave to toil.

Henry Wilson was born in Farmington, N. H., February 16, 1812, and was therefore at the time of his death in the sixty-fourth year of his age. His father's name was Colbath, his mother's, Wilson, and when Henry became of age he took his mother's name. During eleven years of his minority he lived with a Mr. Knight and labored on his farm, and in the intervals of labor, which were infrequent and brief, he acquired the rudiments of an English education. When twenty-one he lived out on a farm and earned forty-five dollars, and with this small sum and a bundle of clothing, he walked to Natick to learn the shoemaker's trade, where he tarried and worked for several years. During that period he organized a debating society among his fellow mechanics, in which he cultivated the art of speaking in public, and learned to investigate and discuss questions of public interest. In 1840 he took the stump for General Harrison, and that year was elected a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. He served in that body in 1841, '42, '44, '45, '46, '50 and '52, the last two years as President of the Senate. He early introduced a motion in the legislature against the extension of slavery, and in 1854 went with Whittier to Washington with the remonstrance of Massachusetts against the admission of Texas as a slave State. He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1853, and for ten years was an active officer of the State militia.

In 1855, after a sharply contested election, Mr. Wilson took his seat in the Senate of the United States, to succeed Edward Everett, who had resigned the position. From that time till he became Vice-President of the United States, Mr. Wilson was a Senator in Congress, being re-elected in 1859, 1865, and 1871, resigning his seat only to accept the Vice-Presidency in 1873.

His public career is familiar to everybody. It needs no recapitulation. At the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion, he enlisted and took command of a regiment. After a brief service, he performed staff duty until he was needed in the Senate.

He married in 1840, Miss Harriet M. Howe, of Natick, an excellent and charming woman, who, losing her health early, was long an invalid, and died in 1870. Their one child, Hamilton Wilson, was a lieutenant in the army, and died in Texas in 1866, when twenty years old. His family may be said to begin and end with him.

An autopsy was had, and pathological changes appeared in the brain, heart, and kidneys. The base of the brain showed that it had been subject to inflammatory attacks, which had involved more or less the spinal cord, and it was probably an attack of this kind that caused his death. The body was embalmed and taken to his home in Massachusetts. Our readers will see in another column what tokens of respect and bereavement were shown to our illustrious dead, as his body was being transported from Washington to his home in Natick.

CONGRESS assembles next Monday, and things are now beginning to shape themselves and appear lively. The greater part of the interest of course centres in the organization of the House of Representatives. The Democracy are having a lively time. Woods, Randall, Cox and Kerr, are marshaling their forces for the fight, but the chances are said to be decidedly in favor of the latter, while Woods is no where. We do not pretend to account for this, for we always regarded Woods as a representative Democrat, and we should suppose they would desire to elevate to this responsible position a representative man, and certainly Woods ought to be corrupt enough to suit their purpose.

The unterrified have been thrown into a fever of excitement during the past few days by the announcement of a combination of the Southern members to control the organization. They can do it if they so desire, and perhaps they will. Let them fight! "its none of our funeral."

THE SUCCESS of Secretary Bristow's raid upon the revenue pirates shows what one man can accomplish who is in earnest. The amount already recovered or secured to the Treasury is in the vicinity of two million dollars, and this amount is likely to be augmented, for we are told that the frauds in Chicago have been as magnificent as those in St. Louis. The Cincinnati distillers are said to have kept out of the ring, but we doubt this. The combination was so extensive that distillers could not pay expenses outside of it. The petty agents who were such convenient tools in the hands of the distillers and officials will, on the same principle, become fast witnesses for Government, since dishonesty is always for sale to the highest or safest bidder. Illicit manufacturers all over the country have taken the alarm and the cry is sauve qui peut. We shall therefore look daily for new developments.

How the Democracy Carried the Election in Mississippi.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing from Jackson, tells how the thing was done in Mississippi. There was universal apprehension of an outbreak, and a great many families were sent to Vicksburg, that city having been so garrisoned with police and special officers as to be considered safe. All the whites were armed, and all the negroes knew it. There was a general and polite understanding that too much Republicanism meant blood; and every one knew that a single spark of trouble would kindle a war, and everyone was careful accordingly. When a negro approached the polls with a Republican ticket in his hands, he was met with bantering entreaties to change it for a Democratic ticket, and with the memory of Clinton fresh in his mind he was ordinarily easy to convert. A favorite trick was to bet with a negro that he was afraid to vote the Democratic ticket—bet him $2; and pay the money after he had won it, as he generally did whether he wanted to or not. As it was in Jackson, so it was all over the State, except in some places where "chaff" was discarded to make room for open threat, which served equally well. The State was carried by the Democrats as much by terrorism as though they had driven the colored men to the polls at the bayonet's point.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1875

A GIGANTIC FRAUD.

If to the Graphic Company of New York, the surface printing of bank checks does not prove a "big bonanza" with "millions in it," it will be only because the company has to come down too heavily with the "spondulicks," to those who awarded the company the contract for this "fat take."

As a little light upon this check-stamp printing may eventually prove the means of scotching the swindle, I will tell you something about it. It being much more convenient to have check books with stamps printed upon the checks, an arrangement was made by the Revenue Bureau at Washington, with the Butler & Carpenter bank note printing company of this city, to place the impression of the government, or two-cent revenue stamp upon all such checks so required by banks, and others. This Philadelphia company was limited in its prices for such printing, being permitted to charge $3 50 for 1.000 impressions of 6 checks each, which made the cost of placing the impression of the stamp upon 6,000 checks, three dollars and fifty cents, an amount not generally complained of, although any good job printer anywhere would be right glad to do it for $2.00 per 1.000 impressions.

Recently this work was given to the New York Graphic Company, with government authority to charge ten dollars per 1.000 impressions, notwithstanding the Butler Company proposed to continue at the old price of $3.50. Therefore, for every ream of paper made into bank checks, and on which this company places an impression of the check stamp, the sum of $10 is transferred from somebody's account to the "Stamp Printing Ring," of which said ten dollars, at least $6.50 represents the amount stolen by the authority of law.

This is a just cause for complaint by the banking institutions of the country, and why it is tamely tolerated by them passes my comprehension. There is one bank in this city whose depositors use 1.000 such checks per day; this bank then, alone, will have to pay the Graphic Company $3.000 per annum, or $1,950 more than the Butler Company's rates.

The manner in which it most seriously affects printers and stationers outside of New York City, is the payment of expressage to and from that city, and the annoyance of needless delay by the company in doing the surface printing. The printer is at the mercy of this favored company, as he has no other alternative, when the order is given him for check books so stamped, but to forward them to New York, the money to pay for the stamps (2 cents each) and the one cent per each 6 checks, accompanying the order, although the printer, who probably keeps a running account with the bank, may not get his pay for this cash outlay for three months.

The banks have it in their power to remedy this swindle by unanimously concluding not to have the surface printed stamps upon any of their checks. This would effectually block the swindle, and then there being no money in it for this new "ring," the probabilities are the next Congress would repeal the law requiring stamps to be used on checks.

It is no more troublesome to use the 2 cent government stamp, than it is to use postage stamps, and as the remedy is so easy, I trust every newspaper in the country will advise the use of them by the banks of their section.

MOODY AND SANKEY.

These two well known revivalists began their labors here last Saturday at 7:30 in the morning, and although it was an unusually early hour of the Sabbath day for Philadelphians to turn out, yet, notwithstanding the rain poured down in torrents, and the wind blew bitterly from the north-east, a congregation of 10,500 people met to welcome them. At the afternoon meeting about 15,000 persons crowded into the building, and 35,000 more had the doors closed against them. That there is a revival needed here, there can be no doubt; that an interest has been awakened in all the evangelical churches of this city is evident, and that much good will result from these religious services, is inevitable.

The extraordinary gatherings of people, which swell the hall by thousands, is largely due to Mr. John Wanamaker, who, probably, more than any other person has directed the proceedings, not publicly however, but in that quiet, unassuming yet effective manner so peculiar to him.

For a week previous to the coming of Moody and Sankey, every newspaper editor of our city was hopelessly affected with the M. and S. fever, and from their papers the contagion spread to the people; in thousands of windows, the portraits of M. and S. were placed, and for 10 days prior to the beginning of the work of revivication, a choir of 600 ladies and gentlmen met to practice for the great occasion; these latter represented almost every Protestant Christian church in Philadelphia; all these things, with the reputation that preceded the coming of Sankey, of his being the most renowned baritone singer in America, had a tendency to attract thousands of people to the meetings.

This incident occurred at the first meeting held here by Moody and Sankey: Just as the latter went to the organ to sing "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by," two white doves flew in the building, and sailing around once over the thousands there assembled, alighted on the rafters and remained there during the singing, Mr. Sankey noticing them quietly remarked, "Behold the message of peace and love."

POLITICAL.

Col. Mann has probably less appreciation of the value of money than any person living, and if it has any value in his estimation, it is simply because it is an easy medium wherewith he can benefit his fellow-man. I will relate an incident which I witnessed, illustrative of the character of the individual. Just after his defeat for District Attorney, last November, an elderly gentleman called to ask him to use his influence to prevent a sale of his furniture, by a constable, for rent in arrears. Col. Mann told the distressed individual, that he had no influence with the constable, who was doing only what the landlord directed. With a woe-begone look, the man remarked: "Must my family be turned out of doors?"

That look was too much for Col. Mann; out came his check book, and a minute later the man was bounding homeward, with money to pay his rent and save his family further distress. It only remains to add that the person for many years occupied a prominent political position in the Democratic party, and who probably had done as much hard work against Col. Mann, politically, as any person in this city.

Pool selling on the speakership of the House of Representatives, is indulged in to a great extent here. At Daly's the pools stand about this way. Randall, 230; Walker, 70; Banks, 60; Kerr, 45; Cox, 30; Wood, 15; all comers, 25. The betting varies but little from these figures.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Arkansas, by a vote of seventy to seven, in her legislature, appropriated $15,000 to the Centennial, and the Philadelphia Board of Brothers, a jolly set of fellows, whose hands, when not in their own pockets, are always in those of somebody else, subscribed $5,000 for the same object, and immediately telegraphed to their New York brethern to "go and do likewise."

J. Boardman Reed and W. B. Hazelton, proprietors of the Sunday Press, have been found guilty of libel, in ridiculing a gay little Frenchman, who writes society gossip for one of our daily papers. As this Frenchman has been libelling society for a dozen years or more, it does seem rather a sad commentary on justice, for doing only once what Frenchy has done a hundred times.

Jacob Brailler, who has charge of a car of the Adams Express Company, was fined $25 for cruelty to animals while in his care, the animals being two valuable setter dogs belonging to a Mr. Brooks, of this city. The dogs had been out West for hunting purposes, and were sent home by Adams Express Company, being placed in a box with slatted top and sides, but on top of which and around it, boxes filled with live chickens were placed. There being a fire in the car, the dogs came to hand as dead as Egyptian mummies, and for which the society for prevention of cruelty to animals, secured the imposition of this fine.

Mrs. Williams, mother of two little children, aged 4 months and 3 years, went up stairs to make her beds, and left the youngsters playing around on the floor; when she came back, the fire was all bright, and one of her children had "gone to meet the angels." The mother had left a box of matches near by, and the oldest child touched one off, set fire to herself and was burned to death.

Washington Square, only one block from the State House, contains about 7 acres of ground well filled with trees, and on Tuesday last those trees were literally black with crows, a sight never before witnessed by the oldest inhabitant. What were they there for was asked by thousands of persons. Possibly they came upon business relating to a Centennial of their own, in commemoration doubtless of the feasts their ancestors enjoyed in this same square, upon the Continental and British soldiers chucked into that "Potter's Field" of 1775. The cawes which brought them there appeared of considerable importance as a two days session was requisite to enable them to get through with their business.

Mr. Frank Stewart, who has lately been advertising quite extensively in country papers that, having obtained an immense bankrupt stock of $4.00 pocket-books, he is selling them at $1.00 with the chances of each buyer drawing $100,000, this sum being the distributive profits on the transaction, was convicted in the U. S. Court for using the U. S. mails to carry out a scheme of fraud, and was sentenced to a fine of $500 and imprisonment of 18 months. It is wonderful the amount of $1 bills sent to Frank, who as promptly sent out a ten-cent port-monnaie.

J. W. F.

"IMPRESS," EH?—The Meridan (Miss.) Mercury has this to say of the result of the late Democratic shot-gun victory in that State:

"Now that the negro in this State is down, and his personal self conceit well knocked out of him, it is, probably, a fit time for the white people to impress upon him that the white people will, in future, control the politics of the State, and that he should keep himself in his proper sphere, and leave to the intelligent white man the exclusive use of State craft for the best interest of both races. Impress him continually with the idea of his unfitness for the ballot and that his proper place on election day is away from the polls."

Democratic triumphs bring peace to the South as Suwarro's butcheries brought quiet in Poland. "Order reigns in Warsaw!"

STATE ITEMS.

—They are looking around for a new alphabet in Luzerne county. The old one was badly used up in making a name for Mr. Lycurgus Quintus Weichteemeiztormann.

—Mrs. Forrer, of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, attained the age of 101 years on Wednesday last, says the Express. The lady is in good health and spirits and bids fair to live for some time to come.

—A Trunkeyville woman went to Tidionte on the morning train, did her shopping, gave birth to a baby, and went home on the afternoon train. How's that for a fair day's work?

—The people of Northampton county must be an unmerciful set. A woman of that county stole a fence rail for fuel, and was recently convicted and sent to jail, despite her plea of poverty.

—And now comes the Erie Dispatch, and denies that Mary MacDonald drowned herself, as did her sister Belle. 'Tis often thus the stuffing is knocked out of a first rate item of news.

—The amount of tax assessed in Chester Co. during 1875 foots up as follows: State, 18,425.87; county, $147,156.60. Last year the amounts were, for State, $23,519.86; county, $145,008 50.

—Thomas Eisenbeis, of Reading, who was a sergeant in the regular army at the time Captain Jack was executed, has in his possession the comb used by that noted savage up to the time of his taking off.

—A York servant girl fainted because she broke a teacup. In this end of the State one of her class can smash a whole set of fine chinaware and gaze upon the ruins with imperturable equanimity.

—Two parties were tried in the Somerset court last week for selling goods in that locality without the proper license. They were found guilty, and a fine of fifty dollars and costs was imposed in each instance.

—A swindler hired twenty-five penniless strangers to dig potatoes at Girard, Erie county, and after drawing $260 from farmers, went west without paying his hands, and left a number of unliquidated board bills.

——One of the things that should be done by every young man who has been thrown upon his own resources, is to buy a lot of ground large enough at least to build a house on and have room left for a garden. He need not select a lot in the heart of town where lots are high priced, but in the suburbs, where he can often purchase at a low figure. But if he must pay pretty smartly for it, no matter; here, then, let him invest his spare money. This will tend to induce him to husband his earnings, as having a definite object in view. When the lot is paid for, then he should go to work fencing and improving it; much of the work necessary to this end he can do himself. Then he should plant trees and grapevines, all of which could be done with very little expense besides his own labor; and this labor could be done at such times as would otherwise be spent in idleness, or at least to no purpose. In a few years he would be the owner of a good lot, with fruit on it and everything else which tends to make it a beautiful site for a house. Then let him go to work and erect a house on it—just such a one as he can build without involving himself to much in debt. No matter how small or how simple it may be, just so it is a house, something in which he can afterwards live without paying rent. Having done this much, let him take a view of the advantage he has gained. If the girl he goes to see on Saturday night will consent he can set up housekeeping without delay; and a home all paid for is a great inducement to a sensible young lady. It is his own; no man can warn him out. He sleeps under his own roof and eats the fruit of his own planting. He does not have to pay out his earnings for rent; here he saves from one hundred to two hundred dollers a year and has the money for the further improvements of his property. He is a freeholder, which is no small consideration; and while others, who were less provident, are paying rent and moving about, he has the fond satisfaction of living at home. He saves money and wins contentment. Property always advances in price in almost every community. But the greatest advantage over and above all we have enumerated is, that he acquires habits of economy and frugality. He has an object in view; many a man squanders his money because he has no definite object in view, no well defined plan laid out in his mind. Young man, if you would be happy; if you would be independent; if you want a home of your own; if you would have the respect of all business men, and the good opinion of all thinking people, take the course we have recommended.

——A large number of our citizens will visit the State College on Dec. 10th, the occasion of the visit of Governor Hartranft to that institution.

Poetry.

Kick Him When He's Down.

When the sun of prosperity's shining,
And a man's growing rich every day—
When in ease and comfort reclining,
And golden success crowns his way,
How friends will then flock about him!
But if fortune should happen to frown,
How quickly he'll get the "cold shoulder,"
And be kicked because he is down.

How kindly the world will smile on him,
When life with successes abounds,
How cordially, blandly 'twill greet him,
As in pleasure he's riding around.
But then let reverses o'ertake him,
And friends both in country and town
Have not a kind word with which to greet him,
But will kick him as soon as he's down.

Let a man get position or riches,
(Matters not by intrigue or fraud,)
The world nods approvingly at him,
And his works will loudly applaud;
What though he may be a great villain—
With the simple, the wise, and the clown,
While he's up he's a "tip-top fellow,"
But they'll kick him if he ever gets down.

When a man has plenty of greenbacks,
And he's festive, healthy and gay,
He's counted a "bully good chum," then,
And the crowd approves all he may say;
But just let him lose all his treasures—
Perchance that his wealth may be gone—
He'll get to be nobody quickly,
But sure to be "kicked when he's down."

What's the use of being moral or honest,
Or strive to be upright and true;
For unless a man has lots of money,
The world's bound to put him right through;
They'll go for him certain and surely,
From the jockey to the priest in his gown,
And all stand ready to snub him,
And "kick him because he is down."

Backward—Pin Backward.

BY MELINDA MELROSE.

Backward, pin backward my skirts in their flight:
Make me small again, just for to-night.
I am so weary, and my skirts are so long,
Sweeping the pavements as I walk along;
Gathering the dirt from out of the street,
Looked at by every one that I meet.
Mother, dear mother, I know I'm a fright;
Pin back my skirts, mother, pin 'em back tight.

Mother, dear mother, the days are so warm,
And I'm so tired of this dress I have on;
It is clumsy, and don't fit me right;
Pin it back, mother, pin it back tight.
Now, I'm ready, don't I look sweet?
Smiling on all I happen to meet.
I'm in the fashion, so that is all right;
Pin back my skirts, mother, pin 'em back tight.

Mother, dear mother, I know it's a sin
To wear dresses that show off one's limbs,
But what is a poor girl going to do?
If all the world wears them, she must wear 'em too.
It is only those who are thin that are afraid
To show off a form that is not well made.
You may laugh, but you know that I'm right;
Pin back my skirts, mother, pin 'em back tight.

Our Story Teller.

Robert's Wife.

"I am real sorry about Uncle James."

There was real sorrow in Robert Franklin's voice and eyes as he spoke, and the lady who listened drew her merry, saucy face into dolorous puckers to suit the occasion.

"Because you see," continued Robert, "he fancies because you have twenty thousand dollars that you are a fine lady, affected and useless, not the wife for a poor farmer."

"We must show him his mistake," was the reply.

"But he will not see you. He positively forbids you coming over to the farm."

"Does—does he know that we are married?"

"I have not dared to tell him. Cowardly is it not? But he is my only relative, and I love him dearly. It is not because he owns the farm and can leave a little money, Daisy."

"Hush, love; I know," Daisy answered, putting a soft, white hand over her husband's lips.

"I had no other father or mother, either, for that matter, in all my life," continued Robert; "and if the farm is dreary, it is home."

"And you do not like to be banished! Well, if you will keep your promise and send Jane over to see me, you shall not be. Now talk of something else. Oh, how can I let you go for two long months!"

For Robert Franklin had undertaken to go in person to see about some Western lands in which his uncle had invested, and which threatened to involve him in loss. Daisy could not well take the long journey, and besides, Daisy had other schemes in her wise little head. Loving Robert well, she resolved to remove the only shadow from his life—the resolute opposition of his uncle to a fine lady wife.

Robert Franklin had been gone from the farm three days when his Uncle James yielding most reluctantly to the pangs of his old enemy, chronic rheumatism, told Jane, his servant, that he must remain in his room. The old woman answered promptly: "If you are going to be laid up, Mr. Franklin, I must have some help. I'm getting too old, too, sir; and trotting up and down stairs isn't as it was twenty years ago.

"But who will come, Jane? Girls are not plenty here, as you know."

"I've a niece, sir, would come to me, though she'd never live out."

"Send for her, then, and—oh, rub my leg, will you?"

Late in the afternoon, a little bustle below stairs told the invalid of the arrival of the niece. She came with one trunk in a wagon from the railway station, and standing in the wide, dreary-looking kitchen, looked a picture of healthy beauty. Soft brown curls gathered in a rich knot left little crinkey rinklets on her forehead and caressing her round, white throat; large brown eyes lighted a sweet, fair face, and the neat dress of blue woolen covered a dainty figure.

"Will you go up stairs, Miss———?" Jane hesitated.

"Margaret!" said the new comer. "Don't call your neice Miss, whatever you do. My name is Margaret. Has Mr. Franklin had his supper."

"Not yet. There's his dinner, you see, scarcely tasted."

Margaret looked at the big tray, the blue plate with food heaped upon it, the two-pronged fork and a half-soiled napkin, and did not wonder at the neglected food.

"Show me where the things are, and I will get supper," said she.

Jane led her from closet to closet. In one was a set of gilt-edged china, some fine table linen, table silver, and some glass.

"These were bought thirty years ago," whispered Jane, "when Mr. Franklin expected to be married. She died, and they have never been used."

With her pretty face saddened by the hidden tragedy of those few words, Margaret took a small tray from the shelf, and covering it with a snowy napkid, selected what she wanted from the closet and went again to the kitchen.

James Franklin, weary with the effort to hold a book in his aching hands, was now sitting in a deep arm chair, musing, when Margaret tapped at the door.

"Come in!"

But he startled as she obeyed. Such a sweet, bright face, was new in the dismal old farmhouse, strongly in contrast with the bare meagre room, and desolate air surrounding her.

"I have brought your supper," said she, drawing a little table near the arm-chair, and covering it with a white cloth. Then, going to the door she entered again with a tray. Upon a white china dish was a half a chichen delicately browned, a potato roasted in the ashes, and a slice of buttered toast; and besides this, a delicate cup of fragrant tea.

"You must not scold if I have anything wrong," said a clear, sweet voice, "because Aunt Jane is too busy to look after me. I cleaned the fork and spoon, for silver gets dreadfully black." Then more tenderly as she marked the painful effort to move the tortured fingers—"Let me cut the chicken, sir."

Grimly wondering the old man suffered himself to be fed, finding appetite as the well-prepared food was eaten, and listening well pleased to the cheery voice so unfamiliar to his lonely life.

"Jane," Margaret said, sitting down the tray in the kitchen again, "I don't wonder he is sick—no carpets, no curtains, that great hearse of a bed, nothing pretty near him."

"It's all clean," said Jane.

"Clean it is, but oh! so doleful. Can't we fix up a cosy room?"

"There's room enough; six on that floor," said Jane, "and none used but the one Mr. Franklin's in, and Mr. Robert's, the little one next to it?"

"Well, we'll see to-morrow. Can I have a man to send to town if I want anything?"

"There's men enough. Will you sleep down here to-night, or in one of the rooms up stairs?"

"Down here, in the next room to yours."

"It is now all ready. "I'll go up now and make Mr. Franklin comfortable for the night."

"Comfortable!" Margaret said shivering.

"But the next morning, after putting a tempting breakfast before the invalid, Margaret selected the vacant bedroom she meant to adorn for his use. It was large, with four windows, light and cheerful, as well suited for her purpose.

In the intervals of directing Jane, sending the man to town with her orders, and giving her own dainty touch to everything, Margaret visited the invalid,—reading to him, chatting to him, and making the long hours fly by. It was late in the afternoon when she came in to say:

"Mr. Franklin, the room across the hall has a southern exposure, and I think you will find it more comfortable than this one. Will you try to get there if Aunt Jane and I will help you?"

"I am very well here."

"But you will be better there. Please come."

So he yielded; but once fairly in the room, he could not repress a cry of amazement. Softly carpeted, white curtained, a bright fire crackling in the stove, a dainty supper spread upon the table, the room was cosy and cheery enough to coax a smile from the grimmest lips. Yet when James Franklin sank into the bright chintz-covered easy chair and looked around him, everything looked strangely familiar. That was the parlor carpet taken from the never-opened room below; those were the parlor curtains freshly starched and ironed, and held back with knots of broad, pink ribbon. The bed, bureau, wardrobe, chairs, all were his own, polished till they shone again. The snowy bed linen, the white counterpane, the bureau covers with their knotted fringe were all his sister's work, stored away in chests since she died—long, long years ago. Even the chintz on the chair was part of some old curtains he had stuffed away in the long-forgotten corner of a closet.

"It is very comfortable, and you are a good thoughtful girl," he said, looking around with a keen appreciation of the added comfort. "I wonder we never thought of using these things."

"Now let me read the rest of our book to you. I have some new periodicals in my trunk if you will look at them."

The days flew by, cold weather strengthening, till Robert wrote he was coming home one chilly January day. Margaret had been busy for a fortnight before in the lower part of the house, but Mr. Franklin asked no questions. He had been very ill, but was recovering, so he hoped to welcome Robert in the sitting-room. How he shrank from returning to its dreariness and sending Margaret away, he told no one until he held his nephew's hand fast clasped in his own.

"I can never tell you, Robert," he said then, "what Margaret has been to me. No daughter could have tended me more patiently and faithfully, and when I could listen, she read to me and talked as pleasantly as if I were a companion to her, instead of a grumpy old bachelor past sixty."

"I am very glad you have been well cared for," Robert said, turning his head to hide a merry twinkle in his eye; "you look very fine here."

But when he carefully led the old man to the sitting room both were amazed. Was the handsomely-carpeted, cheerfully-furnished room, the dreary old place in which they had been so contented? While they wondered, a new sound greeted them, the tones of a piano touched by skillful fingers and a voice sweet and clear, singing a song of praise. Throwing open the door to disclose a beautifully furnished parlor, Robert saw also a little figure on the piano stool clad in a shining black silk, with face and pretty jewerly to adorn it.

"Margaret!" Uncle James cried.

But Robert softly said:

"Margaret Franklin, Uncle James, Daisy—my wife."

Then she came forward with shining eyes.

"I wanted to make you love me," she said in a low, tender voice, "for Robert's sake."

"And for your own," he answered; "but I am bewildered, my dear. Where did these things come from?"

"From my old home. They are all mine, and you will let them stay here, will you not? for our new home!" she added slyly, slipping her hand into Robert's. "I don't want to take Robert from you, Uncle James, when he is all you have to love, but if you will give me a place here, too, I will try to be a good daughter to you."

"Give you a place, here?" the old man cried. "I think no greater grief could come to me now, Margaret, than the thought of losing you. God ever bless you, child! for few at at your age would have cared to so kindly overcome so obstinate an old man's studied prejudices."

"Thank you," she whispered, touching her lips to his for the first time; "you have made me very happy."

And as she presided over the carefully-appointed table, in a costly furnished dining room, Uncle James had used for spare harness and bags of grain, but which was transformed beyond recognition, there was no cloud on the brightness on the face of "Robert's wife."

How He Caught Her.

CHAPTER I.

Her name was Katharine—Katharine Hauton. But nobody ever dreamed of calling her so. She was "Katie" to all the old men and women in the village—"Kate" to us young folks who had been her old schoolmates from our pinafores, and "Kate" to every little urchin that could toddle about and lisp her name.

Kate was an orphan, and lived with a stately old aunt, whose least word was enough to frighten an ordinary child into hysteric fits. But Katie was afraid of nothing, and treated Miss Deborah exactly as she did the rest of us—that is, she laughed at her and talked at her in a half saucy, half good natured way, till the lady's grim mouth relaxed and she looked quite good natured. I can scarcely remember having a greater fright than when Miss Deborah caught us in the act of trying on her "Sunday go-to-meetings," before the parlor glass. But the mischievous audacious look Katie cast over her shoulder, settled the business, and I only heard a muttered:

"Good gracious! What is the world coming to?" as we scampered off in dire confusion, and left her treasured brocade silks and Honiton laces lying on the floor.

Katie came to me the morning before New Year in a very unusual mode for her. Her eyes looked red and heavy, as if she had been crying. She sat down with a prodigious sigh.

"What, sad on a holiday, Katie?" I asked.

"Oh dear!" said she with a sober face, "I have been at my old tricks again, and Ned Williams declares he'll never forgive me as long as he lives."

Katie was an incorrigible flirt. She would repent of her flirting, and—flirt again!

"Go on," said I, quietly.

She stammered and blushed.

"Why, you see, it was nothing—just nothing at all. Only George Hearn has been talking nonsense to me lately, and I have listened to him, and this morning he gave me a rosebud, and Ned saw him kiss my hand when I took it—and—and—oh, dear, me, I feel too bad to tell the rest," and she hid her face in her apron, and cried and sobbed.

"But I don't see that you have done anything very wicked yet, Katie, said I consolingly."

"Oh, don't you know," she added, with a fresh outbreak, "the rosebud means confession of love, and I took it, and Ned says I'm a cold-hearted flirt, and he'll never overlook it in me—and, oh, dear, what shall I do?"

"You little goose," said I, warm'y, for I was provoked at her coquetry, "why don't you leave off flirting, then?"

"I will, I will, I'm going to," she sobbed.

"Tell me one thing," I said, "are you willing to marry Ned Williams?"

"Ain't I though?" she said, looking up with a force of honest bewilderment that made me laugh till I choked.

"And is he willing to marry you?"

"Yes, only he pretends not to be." But I know he loves me, she added quickly.

"Then you ought to be ashamed of yourself, Katie," I said.

"I know it. And I am—just as ashamed as I can be," she answered ruefully. But I can't help it."

"I'll help you out of this scrape, Katie," I said, after a moment's thought, "on condition that you will promise never to flirt again."

"Pon honor," said Katie, piously, laying her little brown hand in mine, and looking very demure. "That is as well as I can."

"Go and make up with Ned—that is the first thing necessary."

"I can't," she answered with a doleful sigh, "for if I come near him, he calls me a rattlesnake and goes off. Do talk to him for me, that's a dear, good, girl. Will you just for my sake?"

"Take yourself off," I answered, and on your peril do not let him see you any more to-day. To-morrow, you know, we'll all go to your uncle's farm to celebrate the New Year. See that you look your best and are good in season. Now be off."

She would have thanked me with countless kisses, but I put her out of the room, and locking the door went back to my writing.

CHAPTER II.

THE SURPRISE.

A note from me brought Ned Williams to the door that evening. It was ten o'clock before he left me, and if my little Katie had seen the fervor with which he kissed my hand at parting, I think she might have had cause to be jealous, unless she knew, as I did, that it was all on her account.

The next morning bright and early, I was closeted with Miss Deborah. The maiden lady looked half distracted when I told the result of our over-night debate, but I soon won her over to my way of thinking. She looked at Katie, however, as she went singing round the house, as if she had been a natural phenomenon.

Katie's apple-pie and dumplings were the nicest things imaginable, and Katie herself, with the fun of her eyes a little dimmed and softened by touch of pensiveness, was a very agreeable thing to look at. I began to think Ned Williams was a very enviable man.

My warning about her dress was entirely needless, as I found, when she came dancing down the stairs after breakfast, with a pretty pale blue muslin and coquettish white apron on, and a killing little gipsy hat tipped jauntily on one side of her head.

"Do you like my dress?" she said, glancing archly at me.

"You'll do," I answered. "But remember the bargain, no feud, no flirting."

"Ex-act-ly," she answered, dropping me a mock courtesy.

It was a great affair—Uncle John's New Year celebration! All the country folks had been invited, and the excitement and enthusiasm were at an unusual hight. It had been the talk of the village for months.

To further my little scheme concerning Ned Williams and Katie, I went quite early to Uncle John's (everybody called him Uncle John, although he was Uncle John only to Katie,) and had quite an animating conversation with him, in which he must have said "We'll do it, by Jove," about three hundred times more or less.

As the guests entered his immense mansion he whispered something in a very mysterious manner to them. Everybody nodded.

At last Katie came, accompanied by her stately aunt.

"You are late," I whispered, as I kissed her. "Almost every one is here."

"Am I?" she replied. "Is he here?"

"I havn't seen him yet, my dear," I returned. A fib—I wanted Katie to look for him herself. "Excuse me for a moment; I must go and speak to the Johnstons."

Off I went. Another piece of byplay. I hated the Johnstons. As I was about to go out, stopping unconsciously, listened.

"She'll never marry him," said one; "she's too much of a flirt."

"You're right," said another, "he's a fool to be so easily deceived."

"But she's promised," said a third.

"That don't matter. A flirt promises what she knows she don't intend to perform."

"Have you heard the joke we're to play on them?"

"No," said three voices in unison.

"Well, listen," said the speaker. He lowered his voice.

"It's all right!" I said to myself.

I was suddenly started by a terrific beating on a gong, and jostled along by the crowd to the dining-rooms.

Such a dinner! O my!

And how everybody went into it! That is, how it went into them! Jack Slemmer, the biggest hog in the village, actually had a whole turkey on his plate, and I can't estimate how many potatoes.

And such merriment!

Really I thought the whole table would suddenly go up like a powder magazine!

The moment the dinner was finished, Uncle John shouted.

"Off to the parlor—to have a dance," and away everybody went, helter skelter.

To my great satisfaction, I saw Katie hanging lovingly on Ned's arm.

"He's forgiven me, dear Julia?" Katie, said as I edged to them.

"And she's forgiven me?" said Ned, "Like a dear little creature that she is." Pressing her close to him.

"Oh, don't Ned!" Said Katie.

"Off with you to dance," I said, and a moment after I saw them whirling around in the crowd. "He hasn't got her yet" I murmured to myself. "She's an awful little witch, but she shall——"

"She shall!" said Uncle John at my elbow.

Games followed dancing.

In the midst of the merriment, some one cried, "Let's play the marriage game!"

"Yes, yes!" shouted every one.

A young man jumped upon a chair and exclaimed:

"Silence in the court. I pronounce the bans of marriage between Edward Williams and Katharine Hauton, both of this town."

Every one laughed immediately, Ned and Katie with the rest.

"That's right," said Uncle John; "keep the fun up, boys! Join hands." he said to Katie and Ned. "Here, 'Squire Fathom, you play the priest."

"Ha! ha!" laughed Ned: "Go on sir, it shall not be said that I interrupted the fun!"

"Bravo! bravo!" shouted everybody.

"Nor I either!" exclaimed Katie, boldly.

"Stand up!" stand up!" cried the laughing crowd, as they gathered round the couple.

The lovers stood up.

"Join hands," he said, solemnly, and the little palm of Katie lay confidingly in Ned's.

"Go on," cried the laughing girls who stood beside her, as he seemed about to pause.

He drew himself up and went quietly through the marriage service. Katie listened with a dreamy smile upon her lips; perhaps she was thinking of the time when it should all be in earnest. Suddenly she started as the words fell upon her ear:

"I pronounce you man and wife.—And whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

"Married!" gasped Katie, turning pale and looking appealingly at Ned.

He gave her a gleeful, triumphant kiss.

"You were so slippery, Katie, I had to take you unawares. Now will you forgive me, Mrs. Williams?"

"No, I won't" said Katie.

"Yes you will, Katie," said Uncle John. "Throw yourself in his arms this instant. Now—one—two—three!"

Katie turned, and to the surprise of everybody, threw herself into her lover's arms.

"I do love you Ned," she whispered in his close embrace.

"I know you do," said Ned.

"Another dance!" shouted Uncle John.

Katie has now a house of her own, with several little cherubs to test the sound of its walls. She grows prettier, and saucier, and a greater coquette every day—but, she flirts only with her husband, whom she loves dearer than life.

The White Dove.

Story of a Young Woman Who was Blessed Without Her Knowledge—A Very Extraordinary Occurrence.

The Muscatine (Iowa) Tribune of Thursday morning gives the following particulars of a case that calls to mind Dumas' "Memories of a Physician." It says: "Some months ago a Muscatine young lady accepted the situation as a teacher in a school a few miles from the city. Returning home recently she was taken sick and a physician called. An examination by a physician revealed the fact that she was about to become a mother. The terrible opinion fell like a thunderbolt upon the parents; but it smote the heart of the girl with a grief and terror and amazement which no language can describe. She could not and would not believe her physician. Her pale lips asserted and reasserted the most positive innocence of any and all circumstances leading to such a result. She as solemnly affirmed her ignorance of her condition until thus informed by the physician.

On inquiring into her relations with the family boarding her, it was ascertained that there were two grown up sons, but there was no circumstance showing the least improper intimacy between either of them and the teacher, or between her or any other party of the neighborhood. Her deportment in the district had been most scrupulously correct.

That she must have been drugged was the only remaining explanation of the case. To this solution examination was directed, and the girl stated that on one occasion one of the sons above mentioned advised her to keep the door of her chamber locked at night. Up to that time she had not locked her door, but did subsequently. No other circumstance was elicited to throw any light upon the mystery.

The farmer with whom she boarded was summoned to the city, and being informed of the case, was greatly astonished, and professed the deepest sympathy. He could not believe thet either of his sons could be guilty of the crime; nor did he think them at all qualified, by their knowledge of drugs, for its accomplishment. It has since been learned that one of the sons had spent some months in a drug store, and we conclude our story of the cirme by mentioning that the child at its birth was taken by the farmer to his home for adoption.

We come now to take a page in the history of the girl's experience, which the superstitious and believers in omens will declare to be more interesting and significant that what has been written.

After the birth of the child the young mother solemnly raised her hand and called God to witness that she knew nothing of its conception or fatherhood. In spite of these impressive asservations more or less suspicion still clouded the girl's innocence. This suspicion was of a nature that involved questions of medical science. But last Sunday a new witness appeared in the case. The circumstance of the testimony is related by an eye witness, a lady of fifty years of age, no relation of the family, and esteemed as one of the most respected members of society. Sunday afternoon while a number were in the sick room, a white dove appeared at the window, and beat its bill against the panes in a vain endeavor to enter. Barred from admission at this point, the bird disappeared and immediately sought another place of entrance which it found at the back door of the dwelling. Here it entered and made its way directly to the sick room, when it flew to the bed, perched for a moment on the footboard, and then made its way to the prostrate head of the poor patient, where it nestled in perfect security, and was only removed by hand!

How will the world view this singular incident. Is it a judgment from Heaven pronounced in favor of the innocence of the girl? You may laugh at this idea, but you must concede that the visitation of the white dove was unnatural—supernatural. Neither this bird nor any dove had ever been domesticated at the house, or had their cot in the neighborhood. The visit was no sequence of anything going before. It was a flash of light from darkness, and to darkness it returned. To our understanding it is like a "ray of darkness;" it has no light, and is only—mystery. The white dove, for ages, has been symbolic of purity. It is so treated in the Sacred Word. Had it this meaning for her, who had no witness for innocence, and whose situation was as much a mystery to herself as to her friends?

Playing Horse in California.

The Contra Costa (Cal.) News tells the following: "Little Charlie Van Auden, who is not quite three years old, resides in San Francisco, and is occasionally brought to Pacheco on a visit. He betrays an extraordinary fondness for horses, and when at home can hardly be kept away from the horses, where he plays with a pet horse without fear, and, as it seems without danger. He delights in crawling beneath the horse and between his feet, while the animal moves only his head and extends his ears as he watches the gambols. Charley was in town the other day and tottled off surreptitiously. When his absence was discovered he was sought for in alarm and he was finally found in a stable stall with an unbroken and unruly colt. The child had fastened a short rope around a hind leg of the colt, and when found was playing hoss with the utmost glee. "I wouldn't have tried that trick for $200," said the hostler. "If it wasn't a bady that did it, he'd have been kicked to death sure." Well, now, it does seem as if horses, like dogs and good-hearted men, are fond of children.

She was brushing his hair, and he enjoyed being fussed over amazingly. Rolling up his eyes, he said: "My dear, why was Columbus, when he landed in America, like me now?" She couldn't tell him, and he explained: "Because he was tickled at being fussed over."

A Good Story.

The following anecdote is related of Mr. Sheaf, a grocer of Portsmouth, N. H.: It appears that a man had purchased some wool of him, which had been weighed and paid for, and Mr. Sheaf had gone to the desk to get change for a note. Happening to turn his head while there, he saw in a glass which swung so as to reflect the shop, a stout arm reach up and take from the shelf a heavy white oak cheese. Instead of appearing suddenly and rebuking him for the theft, as another would, and thereby losing the custom forever, the crafty old gentleman gave the thief his change as if nothing had happened, and then, under the pretence of lifting the bag to lay it on his horse for him, took hold of it and exclaimed:

"Why, bless me, I must have reckoned the weight wrong."

"Oh, no, you may be sure you have not, for I counted with you," said the other.

"Well, we won't dispute the matter, it is easily settled," said Mr. S., putting the bag into the scales again. "There, I told you so—I knew I was right," said he. "I made a mistake of nearly twenty pounds; however, if you don't want the whole I will take part of it out."

"No, no!" said the other, staying the hands of Mr. S. on their way to the strings of the bag, "I guess I'll take the whole;" and this he did, paying for his honesty by receiving the skim-milk cheese at the rate of forty-four cents per pound, the price of the wool.

"What can I do to make you love me more?" asked a youth of his girl the other day. "Buy me a ring, stop eating onions and throw your shoulders back when you walk," was the immediate reply.

Jane G. Swisshelm says that if she had a husband and he should yell out, "where in blazes is that boot-jack?" she would slip into her bonnet and out of the house forever in just two minutes.

SAM CARY is so mad over his defeat that he evidently would like to see the Republican party ruined. He wants Tilden to come over to it, and stay.

HENRY WILSON.

Funeral of the Vice-President—Imposing Ceremonies at the National Capital—Reception of the Remains at Baltimore.

WASHINGTON, November 27.—The funeral of Vice-President Wilson took place in the Senate Chamber at half past ten o'clock this morning. Although the weather was very unfarvorable the crowd was great. Many were unable to gain admission to the building after ten o'clock. The Senate Chamber was heavily draped in mourning, and immediately in front of the Vice-President's table the catafalque was placed, the desks having all been removed from the chamber. Seats were arranged on the floor for the President and Cabinet, Supreme Court, members of the Senate and House of Representatives and other prominent persons. At 10:15 the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, headed by Mr. Middleton, their clerk, entered and were assigned to the front row of seats on the right of the Vice-President's desk. At 10:22 the body was taken from the rotunda to the Senate chamber, preceded by Rev. Dr. Sunderland, Chaplain of the Senate, Sergeant-at-Arms French, the Committee of Arrangements and pall bearers, and followed by the relatives of the deceased, among them his brother, Mr. Colbath, and wife.

The casket was carried by twelve soldiers, and as soon as it was placed on the catafalque prepared for its reception two privates of the Marine Corps, in full uniform, took position at the head and foot and stood "at rest" throughout the entire service. Numerous crosses and crowns of white flowers, sent to the Capitol this morning by friends of the deceased, were placed on the coffin. As the body was brought into the chamber, all persons upon the floor arose, and Rev. Sunderland read from the passage:

"Lord, make me to know Thy ways," etc., and other selections from the Scriptures. Soon after the casket was placed on the catafalque, the President, accompanied by Secretaries Fish, Bristow, Belknap, Robeson and Chandler, entered and were assigned to the front row of seats, opposite those occupied by the Supreme Court, all of whom were clad in the robes of their office. The Committee of Arrangements and the Massachusetts Committee occupied seats immediately in the rear of the Supreme Court, and behind them were nearly all the members of the diplomatic corps, headed by Sir Edward Thornton, who is Dean, or oldest continuous member of the corps, and behind them were the citizens of Massachusetts temporarily residing in Washington. On the other side of the chamber the relatives of the deceased were seated in rear of the President, and next to them members of the Senate and House of Representatives. Among others on the floor were Adjudent General Townsend, Quartermaster General Ingalls and Judge Advocate General Holt and Assistant Judge Advocate General Dunn, Generals Polouse, Van Vliet, Meier, Barns, Humphrey, and other army officers, ex-Attorney Williams, Commissioner Pratt, Frederick Douglass and others of prominence.

A VACANT CHAIR.

The chair of the Vice-President was vacant and heavily draped in mourning. T. W. Ferry, of Michigan, President pro tem. of the Senate, occupied a seat at the clerk's desk. The officers of the Senate and Committee of Arrangements wore white sashes gathered on the left shoulder in black and white rosettes. In spite of the very inclement weather, the largest part of those present were ladies. Among those in the diplomatic gallery were Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Fish, Mrs. Belknap and Mrs. Bristow.

All being in readiness, Mr. Ferry announced that the services would now begin.

THE SERVICES.

Rev. Dr. Sunderland, standing at the Clerk's desk, then read a brief selection of Scriptures, after which Rev. Dr. J. E. Rankin delivered an eloquent discourse. When the address was finished, Rev. Dr. Sunderland offered a prayer and pronounced the benediction.

The coffin was then closed and formed in the order prescribed and proceeded to the depot of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad. The streets along the route were thronged with spectators, who stood in the cold, drizzling rain. Guns were fired and the bells of churches throughout the city were tolled. The military escort, under command of Brevet Major General W. H. Emory, consisted of a full battalion of United States marines, stationed in this city, headed by the Marine Band, the First Regiment of District Militia, under command of Col. Robert J. Fleming, and the First Battalion of colored troops, under command of Major Chas. B Fisher. The staff officers of the District military, and Col. Pontiers and three others officers of the Fifth Maryland regiment also formed part of the military escort.

THE FUNERAL CORTEGE

THE FUNERAL CAR.

was elaborately trimmed with black cloth and surmounted by five heavy black plumes. It was drawn by six white horses, caparisoned in black, each one led by a groom in mourning. Surrounding this car was a guard of honor, consisting of three non-commissioned officers and ten privates under command of G. B. Haycock. Twelve soldiers from the National Service Corps, detailed as body bearers, followed. After the carriages came on foot members of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Massachusetts State Republican Association and Maryland Republican Association of this city, and a considerable number of white and colored citizens.

When the procession reached the station, the President and Cabinet, the pall bearers, Committee of Arrangements, Supreme Court, and Massachusetts committee, followed the casket to the car, the guard of honor presenting arms as the remains and the President and Cabinet passed.

TRANSFERRING THE REMAINS TO THE MASSACHUSETTS DELEGATION.

The casket having been placed on the platform, Senator Thurman, chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, addressing the Massachusetts committee, said:

"GENTLEMEN OF MASSACHUSETTS: The funeral ceremonies at the National Capital over the remains of the late Vice-President are here concluded, and we now deliver them to you to convey them to the State of which he was a citizen, and by which he was so much honored and which he so well deserves. In the performances of your mournful duties you will carry with you the sympaties of the nation and everywhere meet with sincere marks of respect for the illustrious dead."

Col. Wyman, in reply, said:

"They accepted the precious trust confided to them, and would convey the remains to Massachusetts where they would receive all the honor that love and affection could bestow."

ON THE CARS.

The body was then placed in the car, and the following gentlemen, who will accompany it to Massachusetts, took their places on the train: Col. Edward Wyman, aid to Governor Gaston; Col. George H. Campbell, Private Secretary of the Governor; Hon. Seth Turner, Hon. E. H. Dunn, members of the Executive Committee; Senator Boutwell, of the Council of Massachusetts; Capt. Haycock and a guard of honor from the Marine Corps; Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms James I. Christie; the delegation of officers from the Maryland regiment; A. G. Hills, of the Boston Journal, and Frederick Douglass; James Wormley and Robert Purvis, who, as personal friends of Mr. Wilson, were especially invited by the Massachusetts committee to accompany the remains to Boston. Among the

FLORAL OFFERINGS

on the casket in the Senate chamber was a large monument, bearing the following inscription: "Floral offering from the South, by Rev. David Wills, for the funeral of the lamented Vice-President, the student, statesman, philanthropist and Christian, whose name will ever live in the annals of his admiring countrymen, and whose memory will be cherished by the wise and good without regard to section or party." A large cross from Mrs. Grant also rested upon the casket.

AT BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, November 26.—The funeral train bearing the remains of the late Vice-President arrived at the Union Depot at 3:11 P. M. Notwithstanding the rain, Charles street and the approaches to the depot were crowded with people. Within the depot enclosure the First Brigade of Infantry, under Brigadier General Herbert, consisting of the Fifth Regiment, Lieut. Col. Loney, the Sixth Regiment, Col. Peteas commanding, and a body of soldiers and sailors of the late war, under General Felix Agnues, were drawn up as an escort. The command of General Agnues was here joined by about thirty ex-soldiers and sailors under General Tyler, who had gone to Washington this morning, and accompanied the procession to Baltimore. Immediately after their arrival the casket containing the remains of the Vice-President was borne to the hearse, the band of the Sixth Regiment playing "Rest, Spirit, Rest." The procession then formed in the following order: A platoon of policemen, under Capt. Earhart; Sixth Regiment, six companies strong, in full dress uniform, preceded by a band and drum corps; soldiers and sailors of the late war, one hundred strong, and a detachment of Post No. 7, G. A. R., about thirty men, (colored); Fifth Regiment, ten companies, with a band and drum corps; four carriages containing members of the committees from Washington; the hearse, containing the casket, drawn by four black horses, and guarded by an escort of mariners under Capt. Haycock; and five carriages with members of the committees of escort. The cortege moved from the depot to the funeral dirge along Charles street to Baltimore street, down Baltimore to Holliday, to City Hall.

——Humes' Concert Hall, to which we alluded in our last issue as being completed, is now to be occupied by the celebrated Cabin Singers, students of Central Tennessee College, Nashville, Tennessee. Wherever this troupe have sung the press are loud in their praise. They are rarely gifted vocally, and never fail to charm their audiences. J. H. Vincent, D, D., speaks of them in the following complimentary manner.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept 17, 1875.

J. W. Donavin, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR—I desire to say a word in refence to the service rendered by your troupe—the Tennesseans—at the Chautauqua Sunday School Assembly in August. I regard the invitation which brought them there as one of the best things that was done in the preparation of our programme. No feature of the assembly was more popular than the singing by your company. For ten days they contributed to our entertainment and inspiration. The audience never wearied of them. Their appearance upon the platform for the ten days was sure to elicit demonstrations of applause. The novelty of their songs, the sweetness and power of their voices, the most perfect manner in which they rendered not only their own peculiar music, but also the great variety of songs which they have on their programmes—all these elements combined to render the Tennesseans a great attraction at Chautauqua.

I wish I could say all that I feel like saying in reference to this troupe. The mission they have undertaken in itself deserves success, but the admirable manner in which this mission is fulfilled by them puts the whole enterprise beyond all praise. I hope you may have a season of unparalleled success. Don't forget that you are engaged for the 1876 Assembly at Chautauqua.

With my personal regards to all the members of the troupe, I remain, sincerely yours and theirs, J. H. VINCENT, D. D.

——One of the largest funerals of the season was that of Mrs. Susanna Lee, wife of Mr. George J. Lee, headwaiter at the Bush House. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, Rev. Walter Lilly officiating. Deceased was taken suddenly sick on Wednesday evening and suffered untold pain, until Friday afternoon, at about four o'clock, death ended her sufferings. She was aged 27 years, 8 months and 9 days.

——The cutest, queerest and most remarkable photograph you ever saw is that of Col. Wilkenson's dog, taken by Mr. John W. Moore. It is on exhibition at the Bush House office, and is really worth the trouble of an examination.

——The papers say a new sulphur mine has been discovered in Butler county. The itch won't stand any sort of a show there this winter.

——The Sandwitch Islanders believe that Beelzebub walks the earth in the form of a woman; but the Sandwich Islanders never saw Fred Kurtz.

——Go and ask Sechler for Crampton's Imperial soap. "Just try it once."

EDITOR'S TABLE.

We have received No. 12 of "Peter's Parlor Music," a collection of easy and moderately difficult piano music. This magazine is published monthly by J. L. Peters, No. 843 Broadway, New York. We believe it to be one of the best magazines that can be placed in the hands of our daughters, as it cannot but have an influence to stimulate them in a love for music. It is also filled with valuable pieces of new music, which could not be obtained for three times the price of the magazine at any music store in the country. The subscription price is, for single numbers, 50 cents; for the year $4.

WIDE AWKE.—The Boston juvenile magazine, for November, comes like a wonder-box, packed full with delightful pictures and stories and poems. The number opens with a poem, "The Sad Story of a Little Girl," by Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt, the most eminent of our American female poets. The most noticeable paper is one by T. A. Cheney, "An Afternoon with an Indian Princess," embodying a visit with the Iroquois Chief, "Gov. Blacksnake," who was living at the time in one of the Indian Reservations in New York. It is full of interesting reminiscences, and finely illustrated. The serials, especially the "Cooking Club," are excellent, and eminently healthful in tone, which may be said of the entire magizine. We are glad to commend it to parents, and to add that it is only $2.00 per annum. D. LOTHROP & Co., Boston.

WE have received the St. Nicholas for December, which our children hail as a welcome visitor. We think we do not exaggerate in the least when we say that this magazine is not excelled by any other in the world for children. The present number is full of the most interesting, instructive and entertaining reading matter for the little ones. It is beautifully illustrated, and should be a visitor to every family in the land where there are children. If we would have our children grow up intelligent and refined, we must encourage them to read good books, and to simply glance through the December number of the St. Nicholas is at least to confess that never before has literature for children reached so high a level. THE WEEKLY SUN

1776. NEW YORK. 1876.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-six is the Centennial year. It is also the year in which an Opposition House of Representatives, the first since the war, will be in power at Washington; and the year of the twenty-third election of a President of the United States. All of these events are sure to be of great interest and importance, especially the two latter; and all of them and everything connected with them will be fully and freshly reported and expounded in THE SUN.

The Opposition House of Representatives, taking up the line of inquiry opened years ago by THE SUN, will sternly and diligently investigate the corruptions and misdeeds of Grant's administration; and will, it is to be hoped, lay the foundation for a new and better period in our national history. Of all this THE SUN will contain complete and accurate accounts, furnishing the readers with early and trustworthy information upon these absorbing topics.

The twenty-third Presidential election, with the preparations for it, will be memorable as deciding upon Grant's aspirations for a third term of power and plunder, and still more as deciding who shall be the candidate of the party of reform, and as electing that candidate. Concerning all these subjects, those who read THE SUN will have the constant means of being thoroughly well informed.

The WEEKLY SUN, which has attained a circulation of over eighty thousand copies, already has its readers in every State and Territory, and we trust that the year 1876 will see their numbers doubled. It will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the general news of the day will be found in it, condensed, when unimportant, at full length when of moment; and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world, and we shall continue to give in its columns a large amount of miscellaneous reading, such as stories, tales, poems, scientific intelligence and agricultural information, for which we are not able to make room in our daily edition. The agricultural department especially is one of its prominent features. The fashions are also regularly reported in its columns; and so are the markets of every kind.

The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages with fifty-six broad columns, is only $1 20 cents a year, postage prepaid. As this price barely repays the cost of the paper, no discount can be made from this rate to clubs, agents, postmasters, or anyone.

The DAILY SUN, a large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns, gives all the news for two cents a copy. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year. SUNDAY edition extra, $1 10 per year. We have no traveling agents. Address,

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE

In 1876 the Living Age enters upon its thirty-third year. It has never failed to receive the warmest support of the best journals in the country, and has met with constantly increasing success. Having recently absorbed its younger competitor, "EVERY SATURDAY," it is now without a rival in its special field.

A weekly magazine of sixty-four pages, it gives more than double-column octavo pages of reading matter yearly, forming four large volumes. It presents in an inexpensive form, considering its great amount of matter, with freshness, owing to its weekly issue, and with a satisfactory completeness attempted by no other publication, the best Essays, Reviews, Criticisms, Tales, Sketches of Travel and Discovery, Poetry, Scientific, Biographical, Historical and Political Information, from the entire body of Foreign Periodical Literature.

Three and a Quarter Thousand

During the coming year, the serial and short stories of the

will be given, together with an amount UNAPPROACHED BY ANY OTHER PERIODICAL IN THE WORLD, of the best literary and scientific matter of the day, from the pens of the above named, and many other Foremost living Essayists, Scientists, Critics, Discoverers, and Editors, representing every department of knowledge and progress.

The importance of THE LIVING AGE to every American reader, as the only satisfactorily fresh and COMPLETE compilation of an indispensable current literature—indispensable because it embraces the productions of

The Ablest Living Writers

in all branches of Literature, Science, Art, and Politics—is sufficiently indicated by the following recent

The Farmer's Son.

A farmer and his little child
Walked out one summer morn,
Through meadow land and forest land,
And fields of golden corn.

"See, child," the sturdy farmer said,
"How fair the growing grain!
'Twill make thy father rich and free,
When winter comes again.'

Then plucked he at the golden corn,
The little, gentle lad,
And kissed it; "Bless the corn," he said,
"That makes my father glad."

"Nay, child," he smiled upon his boy;
"The fair grain does its best;
Yet as it grows and ripens here,
Obeys but God's behest."

Then raised the lad his little hand,
And bared his curly head;
"Bless God! He loves my father dear,
So loves us all," he said.

The sturdy farmer's eyes were wet,
"Amen!" then whispered he;
"'Tis rare I pray, but bless the Lord,
Who gave my son to me!"

Rules for Milking.

The following rules are issued from a New York cheese factory for the use of its patrons, and are worthy of a wider dissemination:

Milch cows should have free access, at all times, to good running water.

They should never be heated by being run, stoned or dogged.

The utmost cleanliness should be observed in milking, and by no means wet the hands in the milk while milking.

No can of milk should stand where it will absorb the barn-yard or stable odor, or any other scent.

The milk should be strained and well aired immediately after having been drawn from the cows.

Some arrangement for effectually cooling is at all times very desirable, and when the milk is kept at home over night, is indispensable.

Scalding all vessels used about milk at least once a day with boiling water, and rinsing with cold water at night, are essential.

When Chipmucks go to Work.

About Aug. 15th they commence to work in real earnest. Instead of the playful, careless creatures that lived from hand to mouth, they become very sober and busy indeed. Instead of keeping comparatively near home, they wander quite a distance from them, and filling both cheekpouches full of corn, chincapins (dwarf chestnuts) and small acorns, home they would hurry, looking, in the face, like children with the mumps. This storing away of food was continued until the first heavy white frost, when the chipmucks, as a member of Congress once said, went "into a state of retiracy."

The food gathered, we believe, is consumed in part on their going into winter quarters, they spending some time in their retreats before commencing their hibernating sleep. This belief, on our part, is based on a result of digging out a third nest on the 3d of November. The last time we noted down seeing a chipmuck belonging to a certain nest, was Oct. 22. Twelve days after we carefully closed the three passages that led down to the nest and dug it out. We found four chipmucks very cosily fixed for the winter in a roomy nest, and all of them thoroughly wide awake. Their store of provisions was wholly chestnuts and acorns, and the shells of these nuts were all pushed into passages so that there should be no litter mingled with the soft hay that lined the nest. How long this under-ground life lasts before hibernation really commences, it is difficult to determine; but as this torpid state does not conclude until their food supply is again obtainable out of doors, the chipmucks, no doubt, store away sufficient provisions for their needs throughout the early spring, and until berries are ripe.

The terror of the farmer just now is the tree peddler, who fascinates the horticultural soul with a book full of gorgeously colored pictures of all sorts of possible and impossible fruit, such as never yet grew on earthly tree.

BAKED TOMATOES.—A delicious dish is made by taking four tomatoes, cutting them in halves, putting them in a buttered dish with bread crumbs, butter, pepper and salt, and then baking till slightly browned on top.

This year's crop of apples in Michigan surpasses anything ever produced there before.

Temperance Evangelists.

Meetings Conducted by Two Pittsburgh Ladies on the Moody and Sankey Plan.

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

SALEM, Ohio, Nov. 20, 1875.

On Thursday night the series of evangelical temperance meetings, conducted by Mrs. Althea Hill and Miss L. A. Haller, of Pittsburgh, under the auspices of the Sons of Temperance of this place, were brought to a close. The meetings began on Sunday night in the Presbyterian church, and were continued from night to night in the different churches, on the Moody and Sankey plan. They were productive of much good, the interest being at its highest pitch on the night upon which the meetings were, owing to conflicting church arrangements, brought, for the time, to an end. We say for the time, because it is the intention of the friends of the cause here to have them return in the future and continue their labors in the same manner. Mrs. Hill's power as a public speaker is in her intense earnestness. She evidently believes just what she preaches, and is pitiless in her arraignment of party, church and state for their complicity in the perpetuation of the dram shop. She is relentless in proclaiming the temperance reform to be the proper work of the Christian church, and that the church is failing to do its work, which is being taken up by freethinkers and infidels, and by them pushed forward and fearlessly advocated, while the church, to its shame, sits by with folded hands. Her utterances awakened a deep response in the hearts of her thoughtful hearers, and it is doubtful if any speaker ever made a deeper impression upon the temperance community. Miss Haller's readings and recitations were well received, as were her songs and lectures. Together these two ladies make a strong team for the work which they have chosen and to which they feel themselves called. The idea itself is somewhat a novelty, an innovation and a vast improvement upon the popular notion of temperance meetings in which one or two speakers tire the audience with continuous speechifying. It is much pleasanter to listen to short speeches interspersed with readings, songs and prayer than to the old style of lectures above alluded to, and if those who conduct or take part in the meetings are animated by the true spirit, as these ladies are, the meetings are more effective. It is likely that these "Temperance Evangelists" will find pretty nearly constant employment in Ohio this winter.

Another Morgan.

The Oregonian, published at Portland, Oregon, tells this tale about John Morgon, the rebel horseman, who was supposed to have been comfortably buried eleven years ago, but is said to have been living all the time under an assumed name at Upper Cascade, on the Willamett River:

His was a name that in the dark days of the rebellion was heard with fear and trembling by many a loyal heart. His daring exploits in Tennessee and Kentucky, his bold and devastating raids into Indiana and Ohio, made his name a terror throughout the Western States. It seemed as if nothing was beyond his daring, for within the very sight of Cincinnati he plundered, burned, and pillaged; yet this dreaded character, it appears, for ten years has been a resident of Oregon, and so quiet has his demeanor been, so gentlemanly his conduct that he was any other than John Pendleton of Upper Cascade.

Until very recently the world has been taught to believe that the guerrilla Morgan met his death in 1864 in Eastern Tennessee, having been shot from his horse and killed by a Federal home guard. But now comes a singular and apparently authentic tale relative to this remarkable man. The sources from which we have it are of unquestioned veracity, and if John Pendleton and John Morgan were not one and the same man then our informant must have been laboring under a strange hallucination.

John Morgan was wounded and fell from his horse, as reported, but made his escape and in due time reached Oregon. His mother resided in Upper Cascade, and thither he went and settled, taking also his mother's name—Pendleton. Three years ago he came to Portland, and here met our informant, and at once recognized the other. Their conversation reverted to old times, long before the war, and after its commencement, while both were residents of Murfreesboro, Tenn. Mr. ——— (we have been requested not to use his name) was present at Morgan's wedding there, and that, among other things, was talked over. Morgan enjoined secrecy upon the friend whom he had so unexpectedly met here, and not until the news of Pendleton's burial at Upper Cascade, on September 21, reached him did he feel at liberty to reveal the secret.

About a year and a half ago, the bullet which pierced his lung in Tennessee was extracted at Cascade, and it is believed that the same wound was at this late day the cause of his death.

Morgan's father-in-law, a man named Nelson, is now living on the West Side road, some twenty miles from Portland. He is also aware of the circumstances here related.

Morgan, as our informant tells us, was a well-proportioned man, five feet ten or eleven inches in height, dignified in his bearing, having a pair of keen eyes and wearing a full beard.

Old Virginia Hospitality.

I remember a case in which a neighbor of my own, a very wealthy gentleman whose house is always open and always full of guests, dying, left each of his children a plantation. To the eldest son, however, he gave the home estate, worth three or four times as much as any of the other plantations, and with it he gave the young man also a large sum of money. But he charged him with the duty of keeping open his house there at all times, and directed that the household affairs should be conducted always precisely as they had been during his own lifetime; and the charge well-nigh outweighed the inheritance. The new master of the place lived in Richmond, where he was engaged in manufacturing, and after the death of the father the old house stood tenantless, but as before. Its troops of softly-shod servants swept and dusted and polished as of old. Breakfast, dinner and supper were laid out every day at the accustomed hours, at the old butler's supervision, and as the viands grew cold, his silent subordinates waited, trays in hand, at the backs of the empty chairs, during the full time appointed for each meal. I have stopped there for dinner, tea, or to spend the night, many a time, in company with one of the younger sons who lived elsewhere, or with some relation of the family, or alone, as the case might be, and I have sometimes met others there. But our coming or not was a matter of indifference. Guests knew themselves always welcome, but whether guests came or not, the household affairs suffered no change. The destruction of the house by fire finally lifted this burden from its owner's shoulders, as the will did not require him to rebuild. But while it stood, its master's large inheritance was of small worth to him.—[November Atlantic.

Why Johnson's Ram Failed to Get a Premium.

Our county fair is just over; but Johnson's Cotswold ram did not take the prize that was offered for the best animal of that kind. Judge Klump was chairman of the committee on rams, and he manifested the deepest interest in Johnson's ram, indicating clearly that if any sheep ought to take a prize that one ought to. Johnson's ram was by itself in a pen with a high board fence, and before adjudging the prize the Judge thought he had better go in and make a close examination of the animal for the purpose of ascertaining the firmness of the wool. As soon as the Judge reached the interior he walked toward the ram, whereupon the ram began to lower his head and shake it ominously. Just as the Judge was about to feel the fleece, the ram leaped forward and planted his head in the Judge's stomach, rolling him over on the ground. Before the Judge had time to realize what had happened, the ram came at him again, and began a series of promiscuous butts, each given with the precision and force of a pile driver. It butted the Judge on the back, on the shoulder blades, and the bald place on his head, and his shins; it butted his nose, it butted his watch into a mass of cog wheels, it butted his spatacles off, it butted his high hat into a black silk chaos; it butted him in the corner, and up against the fence, then it butted four boards off the pen and escaped into the fair ground and skedaddled, and would not wait to have the prize ticket pinned to his ear. Judge Klump did not go after it. No, no. Four men carried him home. The doctor anticipates he will recover by the next fair.

The Philadelphia Times has increased the number and reduced the size of its columns. This change has compelled Col. McClure to seek new pasture for his reflections. On Thursday he headed an editorial with the remark: "Mrs. Woodhull has unbosomed herself again." If the editor of the Times knew this to be a fact, we think he did very wrong to tell it. —American Republican.

It appears that there is no end to slandering and poetizing the pull back and bustle. Among the latest we find:

'Twas morning of election day,
He came down looking fresh and cheery;
And bending o'er the chair, remarked—
"Who are your candidates, my deary?"

She humped her pull-back just enough,
To make her favorite paper rustle—
"Their names I don't remember; but You'll find them somewhere in my bustle."

Ages of the Presidents

Seventeen persons have preceded General Grant in the Presidential chair—three of them, Tyler, Fillmore and Johnson, by the accident of death to their superiors, but none the less Presidents, because every Vice-President, by the law and the will of the people in his election, is President in case the presidential chair is made vacant from any cause before the expiration of his term. The entire seventeen are dead, yet no one died young, and only one, James K. Polk, in middle life, that is, at 54. Only one other died before he was 60; Abraham Lincoln, at 56, by the hand of the assassin. Five died between 65 and 70; Washington at 68; Harrison, 68; Johnson 67; Taylor, 66; Pierce, 65. Five died between 70 and 80; Tyler at 72; Monroe and Fillmore at 73; Buchanan, 77; Jackson, 78. Four died between 80 and 90; Van Buren at 80; John Quincy Adams, 81; Jefferson, 83; and Madison, 85. John Adams alone survived to 91; and died July 4, 1826, the same day and at almost the same hour with Thomas Jefferson, his most intimate personal friend, while the two were politically as far apart as possible. Zachary Taylor, also died on the 4th of July—the third President who gave up life on the day of the nation's birth, amidst popular rejoicings, the booming cannon and the waving of flags, as John Adams, long before his Presidency had predicted the day would be observed to all time. As a whole, the Presidents have been of an iron race—men of strong constitutions, strong wills and great intellects, and all of these give endurance. They have died younger of late years because younger men have been elected, and the duties—the wear and tear of the office—have greatly increased. It is not with our Presidents as in monarchies, where the King can do no evil, and the ministers are responsible. The President answers for all his subordinates and the burdens and anxieties of the position are now such as to wear the life out of the strongest.

Last evening a farmer tried to drive out of town with his mule and vehicle, but after rail-fencing back and forth across the street a dozen times, he finally got his vehicle foul of a pos'.

"Hello, what's the matter?" asked a pedestrian, as he halted.

"Mazzer!"

"Yes, why don't you drive in the road?"

"Mazzer," replied the farmer, after a long look, "I won't tell a lie fi' die for't; you may think yis mule's drunk, but he ain't—he's sober's judge, an' I'm drunk's Billy be——; whoa, there! back up!—[Vicksburg Herald.

A colloquy between Moody and Sankeyist, and an opposing clergyman.

Convert of Moody and Sankey—Oh! I am gloriously converted.

Clergyman—Ah! by whom?

Con.—By Moody and Sankey.

Clerg.—Oh yes! sure enough, you are one of Moody and Sankey's converts. But how about you being a convert of Jesus Christ's?

Con.—Oh! sure enough-well-yes-yes-well-I haven't thought about that yet,-But never mind, Moody and Sankey attends to that part.

Alas for fashion. The poisoning of women's legs by colored stockings has been reported on by Prof. Marriner, a Chicago chemist. He says that the seal-brown and reddish-brown hues contain picric acid which will poison the flesh with which it comes in close contact. He adds: "As these dyes are used not only in coloring all kinds of fabrics, but also for confectionery, liquor, cosmetics, and a great variety of objects, the danger attending their use can be readily appreciated."

FANCY HER FEELINGS.—A Silver City (Nev.) young lady, who has a passion for pretty babies, said to a little four-year-old angel who has a bran new sister: "I say, bub, won't you give me your baby sister? I love little babies." Young hopeful: "No, I tant." Young lady (winking at her young man:) "Why, sonny—why won't you give the baby to me?" Hopeful (indignantly:) "Fy, he'd 'tarve to death; your dress opens behind." Painful silence the next fifteen minutes.

There is a feeling of greater confidence among business men, since the elections are over. From the manufacturing districts of the east we learn that the cotton mills that have been running on short time are now running full hours. There is also a resuscitation experienced by the boot and shoe manufacturers.

"Oh, Charley!" she gasped, as she rose with some difficulty from her fourth plate of strawberries and cream, "if I eat any more I think I will burst." And Charles fumbled abstractly in his vest pocket and murmured: "That last plate just busted me."

FATHER LINKEN, German Catholic priest of Springfield, Ill., has astonished everybody by marrying the daughter of his housekeeper.

VEGETINE

—WILL CURE—

SCROFULA,

SCROFULOUS HUMOR.

Vegetine will eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula and Scrofulous Humor. It has permanently cured thousands in Boston and vicinity who had been long and painful sufferers.

CANCER, CANCEROUS HUMOR.

The marvelous effect of Vegetine in case of Cancer and Cancerous Humor challenges the most profound attention of the medical faculty, many of whom are prescribing Vegetine to their patients.

CANKER.

Vegetine has never failed to cure the most inflexible case of Canker.

MERCURIAL DISEASES.

The Vegetine meets with wonderful success in the cure of this class of diseases.

PAIN IN THE BONES.

In this complaint the Vegetine is the great remedy, as it removes from the system the producing cause.

SALT RHEUM.

Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, etc., will certainly yield to the great alterative effects of Vegetine.

ERYSIPELAS.

Vegetine has never failed to cure the most inveterate case of Erysipelas.

PIMPLES AND HUMORS OF THE FACE.

Reason should teach us that a blotchy, rough or pimpled skin depends entirely upon an internal cause, and no outward application can ever cure the defect. Vegetine is the great blood purifier.

TUMORS, ULCERS OR OLD SORES

Are caused by an impure state of the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly with Vegetine, and these complaints will disappear.

CATARRH.

For this complaint the only substantial benefit can be obtained through the blood. Vegetine is the great blood purifier.

CONSTIPATION.

Vegetine does not act as a cathartic to debilitate the bowels, but cleanses all the organs, enabling each to perform the functions devolving upon them.

PILES.

Vegetine has restored thousands to health who have been long and painful sufferers.

DYSPEPSIA.

If Vegetine is taken regularly, according to directions, a certain and speedy cure will follow its use.

FAINTNESS AT THE STOMACH.

Vegetine is not a stimulating bitters which creates a fictitious appetite, but a gentle tonic, which assists nature to restore the stomach to a healthy action.

FEMALE WEAKNESS.

Vegetine acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, and allays inflammation.

GENERAL DEBILITY.

In this complaint the good effects of the Vegetine are realized immediately after commencing to take it; as debility denotes deficiency of the blood, and Vegetine acts directly upon the blood. 44-4t

MEDICAL.

Wright's Rejuvenating Elixer.

For the restoration of Nature's forces. It gives new life and vigor to the aged, and causes the blood of youth to course through the veins. It effectually cures Impotency, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Muscular Power, Low Spirits, Disorganization of the Generative Organs, and all the train of ills that follow in the path of the transgressor of Nature's laws. Price $2 per bottle.

It will be readily understood that in the brief pace afforded by the advertising columns of a public print, it is impossible to give all particulars of the diseases that may be cured by the CHEROKEE MEDICINES. That they are destined to become immensely popular is plainly obvious in consequence of their

GREAT INTRINSIC MERIT.

The pamphlet and circulars that accompany the medicines give all the information which cannot be given here, and the remedies may be had of any respectable druggist.

THE

"DOMESTIC" MONTHLY

A JOURNAL OF

Fashion, Literature, and Art.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"How a Journal of Fashion can combine fashion and literature at very low terms is well shown by this periodical. The May number, besides a colored Fashion Plate, has thirty-six pages, profusely illustrated, on the fashions of costumes for ladies and children, seasonable fabrics, trimmings, millinery, lingerie, coiffures, and domestic art, and yet with all this there is room for poems and tales, by popular authors, notices of new books, etc., and the price of all this matter is only $1.50 per annum. Take it all in all, we know of no periodical of which readers get so much for their money as those of the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY."—N. Y. Evening Mail.

"If one wishes the latest information concerning the latest fashions, the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY is ready with the intelligence, aided by abundant illustrations. It does not, however, neglect current literature, as it contains poems, a serial story, some interesting miscellany, and art notes."—N. Y. World.

"It combines literary merit with a great deal of information in regard to ladies' costumes, fabrics, toilettes, etc. It is plentifully illustrated in its fashion articles, and its list of contributions is deserving of much praise."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"A far better periodical than many of the so-called weekly papers."—Terrebonne Republican, Houma, La.

"One of the best Fashion Magazines that comes to our office."—Clarendon Press, Manning, S. C.

"The most delightful of the Fashion Magazines."—American Standard, Jersey City, N. J.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER.

Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation, which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair-glands. By its use, the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR-DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a splendid, glossy appearance. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes."

FOR THE WHISKERS.

TASTELESS MEDICINES.

A prominent New York physician lately complained to DUNDAS DICK & CO. about their Sandalwood Oil Capsules, stating that sometimes they cured miraculously, but that a patient of his had taken them without effect. On being informed that several imitations were sold, he inquired and found his patient had not been taking DUNDAS DICK & CO'S.

What happened to this physician may have happened to others, and DUNDAS DICK & CO. take this method of protecting physicians, druggists and themselves, and preventing Oil of Sandalwood from coming into disrepute.

PHYSICIANS who once prescribe the Capsules will continue to do so, for they contain the Pure Oil in the best and cheapest form.

DUNDAS DICK & CO. use more Oil of Sandalwood than all the Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Perfumers in the United States combined, and this is the sole reason why the pure oil is sold Cheaper in their Capsules than in any other form.

OIL OF SANDALWOOD is fast superseding every other remedy, sixty Capsules only being required to insure a safe and certain cure in six or eight days. From no other medicine can this result be had.

DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S SOFT CAPSULES solve the problem, long considered by eminent physicians, of how to avoid the nausea and disgust experienced in swallowing, which are well known to detract from, if not destroy, the good effects of many valuable remedies.

Soft Capsules are put up in tin-foil and neat boxes, thirty in each, and are the only Capsules prescribed by physicians.

Tasteless Medicines.—Caster Oil and many other nauseous medicines can be taken easily and safely in Dundas Dick & Co's Soft Capsules. No taste. No smell.

——It is of no use trying to make both ends meet this winter. If we can make one end meat and the other end bread, we will be doing well.

——Suppose we do not send any money to the heathen this winter and verify the adage that "charity begins at home."

——Only twenty-four days yet till Christmas! That time will quickly pass, especially if you have a note coming due about that time.

——Trusses, shoulder-braces, supporters, and a full line of druggists' sundries at the lowest prices, at Green's.

——Our friend Foote, of the Berichter, has enlarged his paper. Bravo! brother Foote. An editor who can enlarge his paper in these times has got a good deal of pluck.

——The Centre Reporter nominates Beelzebub for President and us for Vice-President. We object. If Kurtz nominates himself for President, he'll have to find a man in his own party for the second position.

——"The book for the People," evidently Clarke's new method for the Piano Forte, by Hugh A. Clarke, Professor of music in the University of Pennsylvania, is the work destined to be in the hands of every teacher and student of music. Book and music dealers supply it for $3.75.

——Now that the holidays are approaching, and the public are beginning to look around for their presents, we would call attention to the stock of perfumery, pocket-books, writing-desks, thermometers, ash-holders, and the hundreds of choice articles to be found at Green's drug store, in the Bush House Block.

——The shortest charge ever made to a jury, we believe, was one made by Judge Orvis on Wednesday last. The lawyers on both sides (it was a Commonwealth case) spoke long and loudly, but when the Judge's turn came, he delivered the following charge:

Gentlemen of the Jury: If you believe the testimony you will convict the defendant. Swear a constable.

——Freddy Kurtz was in town on Saturday to get his wig with the patent outside. He called at the express office, but found it had not come; then he started up town swearing it was all the fault of the Agricultural Society. He left in the afternoon, going to see Anna Maria, his sister, who is the champion female Granger of Marion township. Freddy wants something to sow his hayseed in.

——When Governor Curtin was in Colorado, he ascended to the top of one of the highest peaks in the territory; and while there, he wrote a message on a postal card, to a friend in this place, stating that he was then nearer Heaven than he had ever been before. By hook or by crook the contents of the postal found its way into the newspapers, and they have indulged in jokes on the Governor's longitude at that time, in a way that is beyond all latitude.

THE WEATHER.—Within the last week the bright and Indian summer, with the haziness of the peculiar period, floating in the soft atmosphere like a golden dream above the gentle slumber of the earth, have departed and given place to the dark and lowering days that herald winter, with their bleak and chilly winds, and shivering rains. Just now (Saturday)

> The morning of the bitter wind,
> Rhymes with the plashing of the chilly rain,
> Chanting a mournful monotone of pain.

CONSISTENCY.—The "Watchman" of Friday last, is somewhat severe on us because, by an oversight for which we are truly sorry, we failed to announce the death of Vice-President Wilson. Still, the "Watchman" need not go into conniptions about it. It was rather an ingenious way they took, however, of advertising their own article on the subject. But the inconsistencies and fickle tendencies of the "Watchman," which have become a by-word in the mouths of all its readers, were never better displayed than in their comments on the Vice-President's death. We have taken the trouble to collect samples of their articles on the deceased statesman, and give them below for the purpose of showing that, in the get-up of their editorials, they are neither guided by consistency nor honesty, common sense nor ordinary discretion. In its issue of Friday last, it pays the following tribute to the memory of Henry Wilson:

> We esteem the death of Vice-President Wilson as an event that cannot fail to be productive of great national sorrow. In his high position, he had the welfare of his country sincerely at heart, and was not in accord with Mr. Grant in many of his plans and purposes. Had he lived, his influence might have been felt for good by the people, and now that he is dead, they have the right to mourn him as a great advocate and friend, who was devoted to their interests.

On the Friday preceding—November 19th—it published the following coarse and brutal editorial in regard to Mr. Wilson, who was at the time on his death bed:

> Vice-President Wilson got a little sick the other day, and oh my! what a terrible anxiety it did kick up among the snobs who hang around him. Bulletin after bulletin was issued in regard to his symptoms, and the opinions of the medical men were quoted with as much eagerness as though he had really been in danger. And the sickness was all caused by eating a big dinner and then taking a bath, the temperature of which was too high, immediately afterwards. We are glad to be able to announce to the public and the many readers of the Watchman, that the Vice-President is now well, and is probably by this time overloading his stomach again. Vive l' Wilson.

There is a type of consistency in these two items that is peculiar. We submit to the public whether it would not have been more to the "Watchman's" credit if it had said nothing at all all about the lamented Vice-President. Before that paper ventures into our editorial rooms to bestow uncalled-for and unjust criticism, it had better look at home and be sure its own house is in order.

PERSONALS.—Mr. Henry P. Harris has recently received a car load of coffins. They are the new, easy, handsome basket coffins just invented.

—Pius Richards, a son of Mr. Aaron P. Richards, living near Port Matilda, had the end of the middle finger torn off on Wednesday last, while loading a sawlog.

—Mr. Olie Meek, foreman of the "Watchman" office, was in the mountains last week hunting deer. A very interesting account of his trip appeared in last week's "Watchman," written by himself.

—Mr. David Klepper has topped off the Centre Hall M. E. church with a handsome steeple.

——The innocent "Watchman" local pokes fun at us because the Water street board walk is completed, but fears we can't manage to pass the beer shop. Well, our contemporary is in more trouble with beer shops than we are; for, since Count Turckheim left, and the schoolbook agents have departed, he has to pay for his beer, which makes it rather hard to get; although we notice that, last week, he traded a couple of local notices with Mr. Jake Henry and John Anderson for beer enough to last him over Thanksgiving. Let the band play.

SMALL-POX REMEDY.—A correspondent writes as follows: I herewith append a recipe for curing the small-pox, though the pitting are filled. It is harmless when taken by a person otherwise well. Remedy: Sulphate of zinc and fox-glove, each one gr., half teaspoonful of sugar, mix well with two tablespoonfuls of water, then add four oz. of water. Take a teaspoonful every hour. The disease will disappear in twelve hours. Give to children according to age. It is also recommended for scarlet fever.

——Have you tried Jake Henry's oysters? If you have not, don't stand upon the order of going but go at once. They are just a little ahead of anything in this town. Last week we tried some of the toothsome dainties and found them large and fresh and nice. Mr. Henry furnishes oysters in any style to suit—raw, stewed or on the half shell, or by the pint or quart. Call and see him, opposite the Bush House.

——A Bellefonte girl wanted to see if her lover really loved her, and she got a Milesburger to come right up to them when they were walking out, and cry out, "come and see my crop of small-pox." The lover stuck down an alley and left her to catch the infection. But there has sprung up a coolness between them that it will take years to efface.

——Montgomery is determined to reduce his stock by selling at prices that cannot be resisted. The attention of all in need of good clothing at a low price, as hats, caps, gloves, underwear, collars, etc., etc., is invited. Come and see if this is not true. From now until Jan. 1st, all who need the above articles will find it to their advantage to call and purchase. No. 7 Brockerhoff Row.

——Tobacco and cigars, the very best in town, at Sechler's, opposite our office.

——Nice toilet soaps for sale cheap, at Green's.

——The basement of the new M. E. Church on Spring street will be ready for occupancy by the first of January.

——How many children of the proper age, and resident of Bellefonte, do not attend the public schools? And why?

——Pure California wines, consisting of Port, sherry, angelica, muscat and tokay; also old California brandy for medicinal use, for sale at Green's.

——The Reporter says that the heading to the Paddy Mountain tunnel, on the L. C. & S. C. railroad, caved in about a week ago, the rock that had been cut not proving solid enough. The mountain will now have to be cut out, which will be an immense job.

——The Centre County Teachers Institute will hold its annual session in this place during the holiday week. Supt. Meyers is making ample preparations, and teachers are looking forward to the feast of reason and flow of soul with great interest.

——A Philipsburg father, whose son had received a good thrashing at school, brought the teacher into court last week, for the purpose of having the machinery of the law return the compliment. They were both shamed into a settlement before the trial came on.

——This is the way in which the Centre "Berichter" speaks of Rev. G. W. Miller's lecture in Millheim, on Friday evening:

> The lecture was grand. For an hour and a quarter the audience listened to an eloquent description of the "Shams" in every day life, and all present showed by their almost breathless attention, that they were deeply interested in the lecturer and his subject.

——Mr. Wm. H. Jones, of Philipsburg, has resigned his position as Councilman in the above named village, for the reason, as he says, "that all of the council are compelled to take a solemn oath to do their duty, and when we do so there is a continual abuse piled on the council, and for that reason I resign." Mr. Jones did wrong; men who regard their oath and do their duty are just the men who should occupy our municipal offices. The men who disregard their oath, and fail to do their duty, are the ones who should step down and out.

THE HOG COMMITTEE.—This self-constituted organization meets every Sunday morning in Bellefonte, between the hours of nine and ten o'clock. They then pass through all the alleys, examine the pig-stys, estimate the heft of each porker, calculate the price of shoulders, hams, and sausage; and then souce into animated discussions on the best qualities of diet, on the care and keeping, and general nature and training of the animals. They make out tables of comparisons of all the pig-pens in town, and by the aid of almanac astronomy, fix the dates of butchering. Last Sunday morning we saw three old men, who looked like the fag end of a century, standing out in the rain prognosticating the healthiest time to kill the pen full then under contemplation.

——We take this opportunity of venturing a little advice to our neighbors of the "Watchman." They have been lavish with their advice to us and we want to be neighborly. In the first place, if you want to cancel the respectable portion of your already decimated subscription list, just publish a few more articles like the one you clipped from the Elmira Gazette, last week. We don't believe that men who have wives and daughters and children growing up about them, will continue to take your paper into their families, if you continue to publish such low, filthy, obscene stuff as that was. Without referring to the number of papers sent back to you last week on account of tha article, we further advise you, if you are determined to outrage common decency, not to insult the religious portion of your readers by low and unmanly flings at Moody and Sankey and their labors, in connection with your obscene articles. No charge.

——The small pox appears to have about spent its force in Milesburg. No new cases are reported, and those who are at present suffering from it, are reported as recovering rapidly, except, we believe, Mrs. Whitehill, who yesterday was hardly expected to recover. Up to the present time, only three persons have died. The first was a little son of Mr. Thompson Boggs, aged 8 years, who died on Thanksgiving day, we believe. On Friday a son of Mr. Thomas Adams, a young man aged about 22 years, died. He was a fine-looking, noble young man, of excellent principles and habits, and the pride of his family. He was called away suddenly, having been sick only a few days. A middle-aged man, named William Curtin, living near the residence of Mr. H. P. Trexlyulny, on the Marsh Creek road, died suddenly last Sunday. The authorities of Milesburg have taken every precaution to prevent its spreading, and we have every reason to believe that it will be confined to its present limits.

HON. JAMES MILLIKEN'S LECTURE.—On Tuesday evening, Hon. James Milliken, as had been previously announced, lectured in the Court House. The day had been gloomy and rainy, and the evening was wet, dark and exceedingly disagreeable. Notwithstanding these unfavorable conditions, the Court House was filled by a large and attentive audience. "Travels in Lower Egypt, and the Desert of the Exodus," was the speaker's theme, and it proved to be most interesting. He gave a detailed account of his voyage across the Arabian Desert, of the Arabs and their habits; of the climate and vegetation, education, occupations and religious beliefs of the people, whose "hand is against all the world." He led the hearers through the routes traversed by the children of Isreal, referring frequently to the Old Testament in proof of his statements. His description of a trip to the summit of Mount Sinai was grand. The cities of the olden time that came in his way were entered and their mouldering traditions brought forth. His description of the city of Petra, once the capital city of Arabia, was really magnificent. The entrance to this once grand old city, said the speaker, is through a pass in the mountain but twelve feet wide, and about two hundred and fifty feet high. At the termination of this narrow gorge, you confront the most splendid of all the structures of Petra, El-Kusneb, a temple hewn out of the face of a mammoth cliff. He described the numberless tombs excavated in the solid rock of the mountain side, rising range above range. Many of them are approached by steps cut in the rock, while others are inaccessible at the heighth of nearly four hundred feet. The theatre, cut out of solid rock, is large enough to accommodate more than three thousand persons. Pharoah's palace is hewn in the rock of the mountain's side, and is in a remarkable state of preservation. It's front is about one hundred and fifty feet, and the same number of feet high. The front is ornamented with columns cut from the primitive rock, and are eight feet in diameter. This stone is a soft sandstone, variegated with almost every variety of hues, red, purple, black, white, azure and yellow, the deepest crimson, and the softest pink blending with each other. We are sorry that we are unable to give a fuller report of Mr. Milliken's lecture. The audience listened with deep attention throughout, and the lecturer occupied near two hours. He is an accomplished and entertaining speaker, possesses a pleasing voice, and his powers of description are most excellent. After the lecture concluded, a number of rare curiosities and souvenirs of his passage through Egypt and Arabia, were examined by the assembly. The ladies of the M. E. Church realized a good round sum as the proceeds of the lecture—we did not learn the amount—which will be applied to furnishing their new church. We are sure they are very thankful to Mr. Milliken for his excellent and gratuitous lecture.

BE CHARITABLE.—Will some one make a move that will look toward making some provision for the poor of our town and vicinity? A long, cold, cheerless winter is at hand, and many families are without the least protection against it. Many of them, we have no doubt, are themselves greatly to blame; or at least the head of the family is to blame for their destitution. But the majority of those who are suffering, or may suffer, this winter, have worked and saved wherever and whenever they could, and yet winter has found them without wood or coal, their meal bags empty, and their children bare-footed and in rags. No work, no money, no credit. How will they live though the winter? Think of it, men of means. Let something be done to prevent suffering and starvation. Nothing induces crime so successfully, as pinching want. It is a crime to steal, and theft should always be punished; but place yourself in the condition of some people in Bellefonte at the present time. Take that little boy or girl, who twines its arms around your neck and lisps its expression of love for you in accents that thrill your soul, and imagine it crying for bread, which you are unable to furnish after having exhausted every effort to procure work or money to supply its wants or satisfy its cravings for food. Would you hesitate to commit a crime? Would dread of prison walls deter you from saving that lovely child from starvation? Let the churches take the matter in hand; and let the preachers quit begging for money for the heathen until the poor in our midst are made comfortable. This is not a false alarm. There is real, actual destitution among a number of families in this place. All are willing to help, but some one must make the move. To help a suffering fellowman and his family is a better passport to Heaven than the thousands of empty prayers that are daily sent up to insult the Deity on behalf of the poor, when the praying hypocrite refuses to do his part toward assisting, lest it might reduce the interest on his bonds, the income of his business, or curtail his own selfish enjoyment.

Court Proceedings.

Court convened on Monday, November 22, His Honor Judge Orvis presiding during the first week of the term.

MONDAY, NOV. 22.

The only case tried was that of the Commonwealth vs. Wm. Vanpool, for cruelty to animals. The charge was of having set dogs on a hog belonging to Henry Melches, and also of beating the animal so that it afterward died from the injuries. The proof of intentional cruelty was not very clear, but the jury found a verdict of guilty. Sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar and costs of prosecution, Spangler, D. A., for Com.; Yocum and Hastings for deft.

TUESDAY, NOV. 23.

Commonwealth vs. Joseph D. Shilling. Setting fire to a barn. It was proved that defendant, who seems to be a professional tramp, and is well known throughout the county, came to the place of Mr. George Foust one afternoon and went into the barn to rest. Mr. Foust and his hired hands were fighting fire in the woods. About supper time the defendant was seen to come from the barn, and shortly afterward the building was discovered to be on fire, and was entirely consumed with its contents. Verdict, not guilty. Spangler, D. A., for Com.; Keller and Fortney for deft.

Commonwealth vs. Mrs. Mary Harris. False pretense. The prosecutrix was a rather ancient maiden lady named Sara Fonsler. She was in love with and engaged to a man named King, and being unable to write or to read writing employed the defendant to write letters for her to her intended, and also to read to her the letters received from the other party. Mrs. Harris read to her a letter purporting to be from King, in which he stated that he wanted certain articles—cloth for a pair of pants, lining for a coat, etc. These things Miss Fonsler bought and delivered to the defendant, who, it was claimed, appropriated them to her own use, or intended to do so. The defence was that the pants stuff was got for King, but cut to fit the husband of Mrs. Harris, by request and direction of Miss Fonsler, while the other materials were presented to the defendant as a compensation for writing letters. Verdict, not guilty; prosecutrix to pay costs. Spangler for Com.; Yocum and Hastings for deft.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 24.

Com. vs. Ellis Williams; fornication and bastardy. The prosecutrix was Miss Nancy A. Irwin, a gay and festive female, whose character, even from her own showing, is far from being of the best. The paternity of her infant, the jury were, no doubt, fully justified in believing, is extremely questionable, and the prosecutrix herself was proved to have charged it upon different persons,—among others, Hiram Banermaster and Daniel Bailey. Verdict, guilty of fornication only. Sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs. Fortney for Com., Beaver for deft.

Com. vs. David Logan, libel. The prosecutor was Matthew Johnson, and both he and the defendant were engaged in the furniture business in Philipsburg. The defendant seems to have been envious of the property of Mr. Johnson, and wrote anonymous letters to those from whom the latter was buying goods, the effect of which was to injure the credit of Johnson. Verdict, guilty, but recommended to the mercy of the Court. Sentence suspended. Beaver, Fortney, for Com., Furst for deft.

Com. vs. Bridget O'Donnel, assault and battery. The prosecutor was the husband of Mrs. Mary Nolan, with which latter lady the defendant accused her husband of improper intimacy, and one day when Mrs. N. was paying her a visit, Mrs. O'Donnel threw a kettle of water upon her. The question of sanity was not raised, yet we doubt if the defendant is compos mentis. Verdict, guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs. Beaver for Com., Wilson (appointed by the Court) for deft.

Commonwealth vs. Frank Sullivan. Larceny. The defendant, who is a colored man, was charged by Mrs. Agnes Durst with having stolen from her house half a dozen silver teaspoons and a piece of soap. The articles were found upon the person of Sullivan. Verdict, guilty. The Judge, in pronouncing sentence, reminded the prisoner that stealing spoons was a crime in Pennsylvania; that if he wished to take such articles and escape punishment he should go to New Orleans. The sentence was to pay a fine of $1 00 and costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the county jail for four months. Spangler for Com.; Bowers (appointed by the Court) for deft.

Thursday, the 25th, being Thanksgiving day, court adjourned over until Friday.

FRIDAY, NOV. 26.

The only civil cause tried this week was that of T. M. Hall vs. A. C. Iddings, with clause of sci. fa. to D. F. Wetzler. The principal question involved in this cause was that of the title to certain real estate, which it was claimed on the part of Mr. Iddings was the property of his mother, and not subject to his debts. The Court so ruled as to the law in the case that a verdict was given for the plaintiff for $132 91. Bower for plff; Hoy for deft.

——"Freddy, darling," tenderly observed the wife of the Centre Hall Reporter on Saturday morning, "I wish you would take your cars down now, I want to dust the ceiling."

——Sechler & Co. have a large tin tank for kerosene oil, made by Twitmire, the tinware dealer on High street. It is a huge affair and holds, when full, six barrels of oil. In this way Sechler saves a great deal that otherwise would escape by leaking. It is by looking after little things like this that this enterprising firm have been able to sell so cheap and build up in a few years the best business in their line in this county. A larger or better selected stock of goods cannot be found outside of Philadelphia.

——Everybody has his weak side, and it is perfectly natural for an editor who doesn't own a cow to come out with savage articles demanding that all the cows in town have no right to congregate on the same street corner. Still it don't bother the cows.

——The grand jury failed to find a true bill against Robert Taylor for selling liquor on election day. There is something wrong somewhere, when so palpable a violation of the law can go unpunished when brought before the proper officers.—[Philipsburg Journal.

——Apples, oranges, potatoes, and everything else that is good to eat, at Sechler & Co.'s.

"THROW PHYSIC TO THE DOGS; I'll NONE OF IT."—We do not in the least feel like blaming Macbeth for this expression of disgust; indeed, we are rather inclined to sympathize with him. Even nowadays most of the cathartics offered to the public are great, repulsive-looking pills, the very appearance of which is sufficient to "turn one's stomach." Had Macbeth ever taken Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets he would not have uttered those words of contempt. It is really encouraging, when one is ill, to find that a little, sugar-coated Pellet, no larger than a grain of mustard, will as promptly produce the desired effect as a dose of great, nauseating pills. These little Pellets, unlike other cathartics, are really nature's physic. They do not debilitate, but tone and invigorate the system. No family should be without Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets.

——Have you a cough? Use Green's compound syrup of tar, honey and bloodroot. It is pleasant, safe and certain.

A FACT WORTH KNOWING.—Are you suffering with consumption, coughs, severe colds settled on the breast, or any disease of the throat and lungs? If so go to your druggists, F. P. Green and J. Zeller & son, and get a bottle of BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP. This medicine has lately been introduced from Germany, and is selling on its own merits. The people are going wild over its success, and druggists all over our country writing us of its wonderful cures among their customers. If you wish to try its superior virtue, get a sample bottle for 10 cents. Large size bottle 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. eow.

——Sechler & Co. pay the highest price for butter and eggs; bring it in farmers, we are all out.

She had been a sufferer for some time; and while confined to her bed she was most faithfully cared for both day and night, by her daughter, Mrs. Love. Her remains were conveyed to the Zion Cemetery, on Sunday, by a large concourse of mourning friends, there to await the coming of her Lord and Master.

> Sorrow came into our dwelling
> On that sad November day.
> With deep grief our hearts are swelling,
> Grief which tears cannot allay.
> Hands whose touch on ours yet lingers,
> Clasped together cold and still;
> And the impress of those fingers
> We can trace where we will.
> Farewell, mother! thou hast gone
> To that happy spirit home,
> Where the Saviour's smiling face
> Ever shall thy presence grace.
